Conferences Continue

Payment for 48 minutes of "travel time" a day to compromise the United Mine Workers demand for "portal to portal" pay was suggested informally yesterday by former Senator Edward R. Burke, spokesman for the Southern coal operators, at collective bargaining conferences, it was learned.

The proposal—promptly interpreted by the miners as an offer for an 80 cents a day pay increase calculated on the basis of present minimum rates of $1 an hour—was understood to have been in the nature of a "feeler" which left some of the operators technically uncommitted. Burke made no direct offer of more money, although the 80-cent figure was discussed in connection with his proposal.

Actually, the "feeler" was regarded as a counteroffer to the proposal of Miners President John L. Lewis for settlement on the basis of a $2-a-day increase—a proposal which was advanced Wednesday.

Miners Indicate Refusal

The miners indicated that they would not accept an 80 cents a day settlement. Observers believed, however, that the discussion of offer and counter-offer, even on an informal basis, marked the beginning of genuine collective bargaining for the first time since conferences began in New York City on March 10.

The 80 cents a day possible increase would be in addition to the estimated 25 cents a day worth of concessions ordered by the War Labor Board, providing a possible total increase of $1.05 a day.

The conferences were resumed at the direction of WLB to settle by bargaining any possible legal claim which the miners might have for "portal to portal" pay under a recent court decision interpreting the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Operators Fear Liability

It was understood, however, that some operators feared that they would remain liable to possible legal claims from individual miners, even if they agreed on a proposal.

The 48 minutes figure was drawn by Burke from a special report to the War Labor Board by Waldo E. Fisher, professor of industrial relations at the University of Pennsylvania. Fisher based his estimate on Bureau of Labor Statistics data.

The Fisher report contained a detailed analysis of five possible methods of calculating pay for "travel time" from the "portal" or mine entrance and back to the "portal," with widely varying results.

The miners had claimed that an hour and 30 minutes is actually spent in travel time and the operators had acknowledged prior to publication of the Fisher report that a "spot check" in some mines had revealed an hour and twenty-five minutes of "travel time."

Overtime Question

Assuming 48 minutes "travel time," six days a week, Fisher found that the compensation could vary from nothing to 78 cents a day. Assuming a six-day week with an hour and a half "travel time," the amount due could range from 17 cents a day to $1.83 cents a day, Fisher found.

Fisher assumed throughout that

Akron Plants of 4 Companies Report Virtually Full Shifts

By the Associated Press

Akron, Ohio., May 27.—War production climbed toward normal at Akron's four largest rubber companies tonight as C. I. O. strikers streamed back to their jobs, heeding a presidential ultimatum to end a five-day stoppage that made more than 50,000 idle.

Plant supervisors said virtually full shifts reported at Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., the B. F. Goodrich Co., Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. and General Tire & Rubber Co. at 2 p. m. (E. W. T.)—two hours after the deadline set in the President's order.

A Goodyear spokesman declared normal operations could not be restored immediately, however, asserting it would take "a good part of tomorrow to balance up our production."

Industrial sources estimated the loss in production of war materials resulting from the stoppage might exceed 18 million dollars.

The back to work movement started with the 6 a. m. shift at all the companies except Goodrich. United Rubber Workers' Union members there first returned to their jobs at the noon deadline after calling for the War Labor Board to reconsider by June 16 a wage decision that touched off the stoppage.

Walkouts at the four major rubber companies started (spontaneously, union leaders declared) last Saturday with news that the national WLB had reduced to 3 cents an hour its panel's recommendation for an 8-cent hourly increase for Goodyear, Firestone and Goodrich rubber workers. The board said workers' present hourly earnings at the "big three" average $1.15 to $1.25.

Strike Halts Output

Jamestown, N. Y., May 27 (AP).—Production at the Marlin Rockwell Corp., Jamestown's largest war plant, has halted completely, a company official said today, as a result of an unauthorized strike of members of the C. I. O.-United Automobile Workers.

Edward F. Gray, assistant regional director of the union, said 1900 have stopped work. The plant manufactures ball and roller bearings.

Gray attributed the spread to what he termed the "delay of the War Labor Board in announcing a wage decision in the union's case."

Conference Ended

Combined Staffs Reach Accord On Global Program for Victory

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

The Anglo-American strategists who have been meeting at the White House with President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill have agreed on a victory plan that encompasses the globe.

President Roosevelt late yesterday issued the following statement:

"The conference of the combined staffs in Washington has ended with complete agreement on future operations in all theaters of war."

It will be up to the Axis to guess where those "future operations" will explode. However, the statement made it clear that the Allied war plans had been mapped on a global scale, and comprehended blows against Japan as well as against Germany and Italy.

Prime Minister Churchill, at a joint press conference with President Roosevelt on Tuesday, envisioned the Allies waging war with equal vigor on both the great fronts—the Pacific and Europe.

At the end of that press conference, President Roosevelt told reporters the strategy talks were continuing, and that he and Churchill and their military advisers still had a lot of ground to go over.

So far as is known, Soviet Russia has not been represented at the conferences that have been taking place in the White House.

Nonetheless, there is good reason to believe that the plans adopted are tied in with Stalin's 1943 plans for the Red army.

To begin with, a short time before Prime Minister Churchill and his retinue arrived here on May 11, President Roosevelt wrote a confidential letter to Premier Stalin and entrusted it to Joseph E. Davies to deliver in Moscow.

Reports from the Soviet capital mentioned the "cordial atmosphere" which Davies enjoyed in the Kremlin when he made his final call to get Stalin's reply to President Roosevelt. This is extravagant language when viewed in the light of the situation existing a year ago. Then the Moscow radio and the Moscow newspapers were kicking up a ceaseless clamor for a "second front" to draw off German strength from the Russian front.

Moreover, Davies told reporters that "Stalin spoke with great satisfaction about the way Churchill and Roosevelt are working in such close contact."

"In my opinion," he said, "there is every evidence that these three men know all about each other's plans."

150,000 Russians Pierce Nazis' Kuban Defenses; Japs' Attu Line Cracked

Enemy's 2 Remaining Grips On Aleutian Isle Weakening

By John Hightower
Associated Press Staff Writer

After two days of violent, hand-to-hand fighting United States troops on Attu Island have cracked the ridge defenses guarding the main Japanese position at Chichagof Harbor, the Navy reported yesterday.

A small area at the head of the harbor is one of two main positions still held by enemy forces on the westernmost Aleutian island. When it falls the Japanese will hold only a ridge line about 3 miles to the south between Lake Cories and Lake Nicholas. The ridge line already is under American pressure.

An American foothold on the high ground dominating the Chichagof position was won Wednesday. A United States warship had turned its heavy guns on enemy shore installations the day before and started numerous fires.

This was followed by powerful Army air attacks presumably from the advance American base on Amchitka Island 233 miles to the southeast.

Secretary of War Stimson reported American casualties had been "relatively light"—127 killed, 399 wounded, and 118 missing.

Informed authorities said it would not be surprising if the Japanese losses already exceed 2000.

Stimson said most of the fighting so far has been done by the infantry, much of it by small patrols using bayonets and hand grenades to clear out Japanese foxholes, machinegun nests and other positions.

He reported that the American troops now hold both sides of Chichagof Bay and are attacking along the ridge dominating the remaining Japanese positions. He said that clear weather would greatly accelerate the operation since it would permit heavy and sustained air support.

The Navy communique said that on Wednesday Army troops "succeeded in gaining a foothold on the high ground south of Chichagof," but did not give any later details. In conjunction with Stimson's disclosures, it indicated that a considerable body of American troops had moved up on the ridge in a drive to hurl the Japanese back to the lowlands bordering the harbor. The communique also said that all buildings in the Chichagof area had been destroyed.

There was little information here about the Japanese force dug in on a ridge south of Lake Cories. The enemy's crumbling positions around the head of Chichagof and the dug-in ridge line south of Lake Cories are all that remain of the three main enemy-held areas reported late last week. The Navy had announced yesterday the clean-up of Japanese positions in the Chichagof Valley sector, reducing the enemy's holdings to two.

Nazis Acknowledge Soviet Advances Near Novorossisk; Air War Violent

By the Associated Press

London (Friday), May 28.—A Red Army of 150,000 men has rolled back Germany's Kuban lines almost a mile and a half on a front several miles wide in a renewed effort to smash the Axis Caucasian bridgehead, the Berlin radio announced early today.

Supported by "at least 170 tanks," 10 Soviet divisions launched the massive attack, said a Transocean dispatch broadcast by Berlin.

However, a "mighty counterthrust" succeeded in ironing out "all breaches," the agency said.

An earlier D. N. B. broadcast estimated Soviet power at 6 rifle divisions and 3 tank regiments, or nearly 100,000 men, and said the main Red drive was 20 miles above the Black Sea port of Novorossisk.

Moscow Reticent

Moscow's midnight communique, recorded by the Soviet monitor here, merely announced "fighting took place in the Kuban northeast of Novorossisk," without giving any details.

Berlin announcements of new Soviet offensives, however, often have anticipated Moscow communiques, the Russians usually waiting several days until their attacks are well under way before disclosing details.

The Berlin broadcasts said thousands of Russian infantrymen punched holes in their lines after a violent artillery preparation, and the fighting extended from the Novorossisk sector on the south to a point near Temryuk on the Sea of Azov in the north.

Planes Poured Into Fray

Both sides were using heavy plane forces. A special Moscow broadcast Wednesday night said 67 German planes had been shot down with a loss of 20 Soviet planes. Berlin countered with an assertion that 63 Russian planes were destroyed against a loss of only five German aircraft.

For days German dispatches had been preparing the homeland to expect a major Russian blow in the Caucasus where the Germans hold an area about 45 miles long across the Taman Peninsula and about 20 or 30 miles wide. These reports said the Russians were moving huge forces of men and equipment up to the front.

The noon Moscow bulletin announced only a series of scattered, small German thrusts, in one of which a battalion of enemy infantry was reported hurled back west of Rostov.

This heightened indications the Germans also were in difficulty elsewhere besides on the Kuban front.

The Berlin radio broadcast one

TopCommand Gets Haan Testimony On Sino-Jap Peace

By the Associated Press

Testimony that Japan would seek a separate peace with China and attack the United States this summer was referred to the high command yesterday by Chairman Dickstein (Democrat) of New York of the House Immigration Committee.

The testimony came from the same man who gave Dickstein's committee two months' advance warning of Japanese plans to attack Pearl Harbor—Kilsoo K. Haan, Washington representative of the Korean National Front Federation and Sino-Korean Peoples' League.

"If only 50 per cent of what Haan told us yesterday is true," Dickstein declared, "this Government should heed his warning."

Haan's information so far, Dickstein said, has been "fairly accurate" and has been reported to the proper officials. "Statements he made before the Immigration Committee two years ago have, unfortunately, borne fruit. Had we paid attention to him then we might have been saved a lot of embarrassment."

Gas Shortage Blamed Mainly On Black Sales

Too Liberal Boards Also Held Cause; Famine To Continue for Weeks

By Linton Burkett
Post Staff Writer

Black market sales yesterday of gasoline were given as the major of three causes resulting in the shortage of gasoline by representatives of the Gasoline Retailers Association.

At the same time the dealers individually were advised that they could only get about half the gasoline supplies they were getting a month ago. This will continue for 60 days, beginning the first part of next week, they were told.

Voices Plea for Doctors

The local shortage caused reverberations on Capitol Hill when Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat) of Nevada, chairman of the Senate District Committee, insisted that OPA Director Prentiss Brown show "intestinal fortitude" and slash red tape in order that District doctors could be given priorities in obtaining gasoline.

The three causes of the shortage given were:

1. Black market sales, whereby dishonest dealers made deals with truck drivers, or other holders of the T coupons to get more of the coupons than the truckers used. A trucker can easily replace his expended coupons. The dealer then would hold his surplus coupons until a holder of an A coupon came into the station and wanted a tank full of gasoline. He would be required to pay a premium for his black market gasoline.

2. Use of counterfeit coupons. While black market operations here were believed to be widespread, there were few instances of the use of counterfeits, officials said.

3. Action of the rationing boards in being too liberal with their issuance of coupons.

All of these factors, dealers' representatives said, add up to a

Staff Pared To Save Gas In Blackout

Limited Mobilization Ordered Tonight in New 'All-Clear' Test

Civilian Defense Director R. C. Whitehurst yesterday ordered that only warden and police services will be mobilized for the blackout to be staged sometime between 8 o'clock and midnight tonight. Less fuel for official cars thus will be necessary.

Since the main purpose of the blackout is to acquaint the public with the new audible "all-clear" signal, Whitehurst decided that limited mobilization would be adequate.

United States Civilian Defense Coordinator John Russell Young has asked Col. Leonce Raoul Legendre to request defense directors of the suburban areas to follow the District's lead.

Young said that all regulations of lighting and traffic control will be rigidly enforced during the test.

In Montgomery County, only wardens and auxiliary police will report for duty during the blackout. Regular members on the staffs of control and report centers, however, will report to their stations is usual.

Better Days Ahead, Pope Tells Bishops

Vatican City, May 28 (DNB).—The Vatican radio today quoted a letter from Pope Pius XII to the German bishops in which the Pontiff denounced Nazism and assured the prelates of "the better times that lie in wait for them."

The broadcast, recorded by the United States Foreign Broadcast Intelligence Service, followed by 24 hours a condemnation as propaganda the Paris radio accusation that the Catholic Church had a "crushing responsibility in unleashing the present war."

Revenue Gain Of 3 Billions Seen in Tax Bill

Sales Tax Predicted As Means of Reaching Goal of Treasury

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Pay-as-you-go tax legislation, slated for House passage Tuesday, will increase the Government's revenue during the next fiscal year, July 1, 1943, to June 30, 1944, by more than three billion dollars, the Treasury reported yesterday, after Secretary Morgenthau said that the Administration's goal was still fixed at 16 billion additional revenue dollars for the year.

Secretary Morgenthau told his press conference that the 16 billion was needed "very, very badly," but that he was not yet ready to talk about how Congress might raise it. Some Capitol tax legislators predicted that Congress later would turn to study of a sales tax, disliked by the Treasury, but conceded that they expected the Treasury to make another bid for a spending tax as it did last year.

Final Touches Added

Meanwhile Capitol tax leaders put finishing touches on the measure, before sending it to the House floor for action Tuesday. Passage in both Houses is expected next week, in order to permit starting the new withholding collection system for salary and wage earners July 1.

In a closed meeting, the House and Senate conferees agreed to accept the original House clause for abating in full the income taxes of any member of the armed forces who dies in service during the war.

They extended the provision to any United Nation's serviceman paying United States taxes. They

Stalin Hints Accord on Note, Davies Says

U. S. Envoy, Given Reply to Letter, Prepares for Return

By William McGaffin
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, May 27.—Joseph E. Davies, finished with his talks with Premier-Marshal Joseph Stalin, prepared tonight to leave for Washington with a secret and sealed message for President Roosevelt in reply to the letter he delivered to Stalin last week.

He described his visit to the Kremlin as extremely pleasant and said that Stalin "gave every indication that he was entirely in accord with the contents of the President's letter."

He said he based this statement on the cordial atmosphere with which he was received.

"I will make no comment either directly or by inference as to what the letter contains," he said of Stalin's reply.

Davies was a guest yesterday of Soviet Foreign Commissar Molotov at a luncheon observing the first anniversary of the Anglo-Soviet pact. Molotov's statement that the pact would endure in peace as well as war, Davies said, was "one of the most momentous statements for some time."

Asked to discuss the military situation, Davies said:

"The general impression I get is that the Russians are confident but not aggressively so. They feel that a good stiff offensive is still left in the Germans, who must be taken seriously. But I find in all Russians great confidence in the morale of their soldiers."

Of the luncheon, Davies said "interesting and frank talk between friends" had produced joking as well as serious conversation. He

Nazi Factories Blasted From 200-Ft. Height

Zeiss Optical Plant And Glass Works Hit by R.A.F. Planes

London (Friday), May 28 (AP).—R. A. F. heavy bombers attacked Germany during the night, the British announced today.

By the Associated Press

London (Friday), May 28.—Speedy Mosquito bombers of the R. A. F. bomber command darted 500 miles from England Thursday evening and penetrated heavy Nazi defenses to bomb from below 200 feet the world-famous Carl Zeiss instrument works and other targets in the central German city of Jena, the Air Ministry announced early today.

The raid was carried out by two formations of the wooden bombers which, "by skillful navigation in difficult conditions," reached Jena just before dark, the Air Ministry said. Jena is in Thuringia, 135 miles south and slightly west of Berlin.

"Antiaircraft fire was intense and a balloon barrage was flying over the target," said a communique, "but the Mosquitos pressed home their attacks on the Carl Zeiss instrument works and the Schott glass works from below 200 feet.

"Preliminary reports indicate that both factories were hit.

"Three of our aircraft are missing, two of which were seen to collide in the air over Germany."

The factories of Carl Zeiss make all types of optical instruments for the German army, navy and air services, and the Schott glass works makes raw and finished optical glass. The two are the most important factories of their kind in all Germany.

The mission meant that the Mosquitos had to make a round-trip of considerably more than 1000 miles.

Big Airfield In Sicily Hit By U. S. Planes

Heavy Bombers Batter Comiso, Other Targets As Raids Continue

By Daniel De Luce
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, May 27—American Flying Fortresses slashed a screen of German fighters yesterday to drop heavy bomb cargoes on the big Sicilian airdrome of Comiso, while other Allied airmen hit among other things a power station generated by the Tirso Dam which is the largest on Sardinia.

Three German Messerschmitt-109s were shot down without loss to the Fortresses. Two Allied planes were missing in other operations extending from Sardinia to the Greek coast.

Docks, shipping, airfields, a power station, trains, and gun emplacements were battered on Italy's southern ring of island defenses.

The Fortresses sprayed steel among dispersed Axis aircraft at Comiso which long had hammered the little British island outpost of Malta. Four or five fires also sprang up in the wake of the American bombers.

Lightning fighters at the same time accompanied Mitchell and Marauder medium bombers in attacking airfields at Ponte Olivio and Biscari, also in Sicily; Warhawks shot up troops and gun emplacements on the little island of Pantelleria, and bomb-carrying Lightnings and Warhawks struck effectively at targets in Sardinia.

A Cairo communique said R. A. F. light bombers sweeping the eastern Mediterranean sank one Axis steamer off Greece, seriously damaged another, set fire to a third, and forced the crew of a fourth to abandon ship.

An Italian flying boat was destroyed on the water, and a Heinkel-3 was shot down Tuesday night by a coastal air force patrol.

Congressmen Smash at OPA; Executives' Fight Rocks Agency

Moves Under Way To Slash Its Funds, Partition Power

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

A congressional pincers movement yesterday started closing in on Prentiss Brown's Office of Price Administration, with independent moves to partition rationing authority of the harried agency, cut its funds, and wipe out authority to subsidize consumer prices.

Long simmering resentment against OPA policies, inherited from Leon Henderson's original price control try, boiled over in a three-way attack on the very life of the agency.

1. Representative Wright Patman (Democrat) of Texas, with reported Farm Bureau Federation support, proposed an amendment to the Commodity Credit Corp. loan bill transferring OPA's food price and rationing authority to War Food Administrator Chester Davis.

2. A bipartisan move to clip OPA funds and restrict some of its activities awaited a House Appropriations Committee report on the pending war agency bill. A rider will be offered in the House designed to block payment of salaries to any OPA official participating in the subsidy program.

3. Members of the House and Senate Banking Committees were considering an amendment to the CCC bill striking from another

Maxon, Galbraith At Odds Over Former's Demands

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Staff Writer

A "showdown" fight for executive power between two top officials shook OPA yesterday, forcing Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown into an impromptu press conference to tell what he could about the row.

But the press conference turned out to be void of specific information as the price administrator, much like a parent in a noisy household, tried to indicate that the fight was just one of those things.

What apparently happened, however, was that Lou R. Maxon, Detroit advertising executive, who is a deputy administrator of OPA in charge of information, asked Brown to give him complete control over OPA policies and personnel or he would leave the organization immediately. The two discussed the matter for several hours in Brown's office.

Learning of this, Dr. J. K. Galbraith, deputy administrator in charge of price control, told reporters that if Maxon got the job he would quit.

The flare-up was generally regarded as probably the biggest personnel headache Brown has had to face so far, as much of the technical detail of price control rests with Galbraith, while Maxon

U. S. Army's Tunisian Drive Losses Are Placed at 18,558

By William F. Frye
Associated Press Staff Writer

The cost of victory in Tunisia was less than 70,000 Allied casualties, Secretary Stimson reported yesterday, while the Axis lost 323,000 killed, wounded and captured.

In the entire North African campaign, from the landing which began November 8 to the collapse of resistance on May 15, the Secretary of War said the Army suffered only 18,558 casualties—2184 killed, 9437 wounded and 6937 missing, including prisoners taken by the Axis.

Despite such small losses, attributed in large part to the success of coordinated ground-air operations, Stimson said the Tunisian campaign had developed nothing to cause the high command to reduce its total manpower estimates under which the Army is expected to total 8,200,000.

"In determining our manpower needs," he said, "for both the ground forces and the air forces, it was assumed that the airground cooperation attained in North Africa would be necessary in all operations. There is no change at this time in our manpower requirements."

The Secretary made no further reference to British and French losses. The Germans and Italians, however, were said to have lost 30,000 killed, 26,400 wounded and 266,600 taken prisoner in Tunisia alone excluding other African campaigns.

Allied ground troops are now chiefly occupied with transporting their quarter of a million prisoners to camps and embarkation ports, Stimson said.

Ginsburg Files Missing; House Investigators Order Return

By Mary Spargo
Post Staff Writer

The files of David Ginsburg, former general counsel for OPA, are missing from the Office of Price Administration, it was disclosed at a hearing of the House Smith Committee investigating Executive Agencies yesterday.

Summoned under subpena to produce the files, Thomas T. Emerson, senior associate general counsel, told the committee the files were unavailable because prior to leaving for Army induction Ginsburg had shipped 12 boxes of papers from the files to his home at Huntington, W. Va.

The remainder of the contents of five filing cabinets Ginsburg had distributed among the files of the two associate counsels, seven assistant counsels and the general files, Emerson said.

Emerson said he had been in touch with Ginsburg, who had offered to return the files from his home.

Emerson said the files removed by Ginsburg contained documents which Ginsburg regarded as personal.

Asked to be specific, Emerson said he thought the files Ginsburg sent home referred to drafts of proposed legislation for OPA.

Committee Counsel Harold Allen inquired specifically about correspondence between Justice James F. Byrnes (now director of economic stabilization) and Ginsburg. Emerson said he thought that cor-

Unity Assured By De Gaulle, Algiers-Bound

By the Associated Press

London, May 27.—Gen. Charles de Gaulle told the French people in a radio broadcast tonight, on the eve of his departure for Algiers, that the forces of the empire would soon be unified and promised the liberation of France herhelf.

"We have paid heavily enough for our absurd division to be convinced we will emerge from the abyss only by uniting in a solid bloc," the Fighting French leader said. "This modern edifice can be built only at the cost of orderly and fraternal effort.

"Vive la France" Slogan

Algiers, May 27.—Pictures and insignia of both Gen. Charles de Gaulle and Gen. Henri Giraud were removed from public places today in preparation for French North Africa's welcome to the Fighting French leader.

The move was undertaken by order of General Giraud, civil and military commander in chief, in line with a policy eliminating personalities and stressing the union of all French.

"More than ever," said Giraud's order, "the French must have only one thought: The liberation of France, victory."

Raiders Kill Md. Soldier In England

By the Associated Press

Somewhere in Southern England, May 26 (Delayed).— Pvt. Harry L. Parker of Maryland Park, Md., was one of six American soldiers killed when a Nazi bomb struck a hotel in a south coast English town, authorities announced yesterday. Two others were wounded.

The Americans were spending a period of leave in the town.

Private Tworyczczuk of Hillside, N. J., and Moosic, Pa., snatched a woman out of danger from falling debris and took a machine-gunned comrade to a hospital before discovering that he himself had been injured by a falling wall.

The dead will be buried in the United States military cemetery at Brookwood tomorrow.

French Regency Plan

Madrid, May 27 (AP).—Spanish press correspondents said in dispatches from Paris today that a plot was brewing in Vichy to oust Pierre Laval, Marcel Deat and other "chiefs of the old political parties" to prepare the way for a regency government in France. Royalists, large employers and many ordinary people, particularly women, and a group of French volunteers who fought alongside the Germans and Italians against Allied forces in Tunisia were said to support the move.

Chinese Flies in B-17

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, May 27 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Lam Wai-ching of the Chinese Air Force flew in one of the Flying Fortresses which struck at the Comiso Airfield in Sicily yesterday and one of the Fortresses gunners who helped defend his plane from an attack by 50 enemy fighters also was Chinese.

General Lam, who is on a visit to the North African war theater, was born in Salt Lake City, Utah, and learned to fly in the United States in 1917.

House Hears Of Dissension In Dies Group

Evidence of internal dissension within the Dies Committee itself as to the value of its continuance was brought to light on the House floor yesterday in a discussion by Representative Rankin (Democrat) of Mississippi.

Rankin asserted that the committee's enemies were trying to give the impression the Dies Committee was on the point of folding up because of the dissolution of the Comintern. He claimed the committee was needed "now more than ever," and added that subversive groups were renewing their activities all over the country.

Representative Mason (Republican) of Illinois, a committee member, agreed the committee "still had a great deal of housecleaning to do."

The stories Rankin attributed to the committee's "enemies" apparently emanated from a statement made by Chairman Dies himself from his home in Jasper, Tex., on being queried by a press association on the dissolution of the Comintern.

Dies statement, as quoted by the press association, is as follows:

"I believe it (the disbanding of the Comintern) will enable us to wind up our work at any early date so that we can make a final report to the House."

The action, Dies said, "makes it unnecessary to enact legislation which we have recommended outlawing the American Communist Party. It is exactly what I have been advocating for the last five years."

Battle-Scarred Cruiser Rescues Crew of Bomber

The Navy reported yesterday that the cruiser Marblehead, famous for its survival of extreme damage during action in the Java Sea early in the war, had recently rescued the four-man crew of an Army medium bomber which was forced down at sea after one engine failed.

The fliers spent four miserable nights and five days on a rubber life raft before they were found and picked up. During that time they were wet, cold and without sleep and their diet consisted of one sea gull and 11 ounces of water.

The Marblehead reached them after their position had been reported by searching Army planes. The location of the incident was not reported.

OPA Price Control Remains on Luxuries

Luxury items will remain under price control, the Office of Price Administration indicated yesterday.

OPA specifically denied that controls would be removed from raw furs and fur garments. It explained that reports had been circulated that controls would be removed, because furs are a luxury item.

U. S. Planes Set Record Felling Nazis

By the Associated Press

London, May 27.—United States heavy bombers based in Britain were officially declared today to have established a record by smashing 74 Nazi planes out of the sky on a single day's mission.

They made it May 21 during the shattering raids without escort on the submarine building yards at Emden and Wilhelmshaven. The actions cost 12 American bombers.

The record tally of enemy aircraft, which boosted to 297 the number demolished in eight raids embracing 16 targets so far this month, was 10 higher than the previous top set May 14 in the attacks on Kiel, Antwerp, Courtrai and Velsen. Those raids cost 11 heavy bombers.

In the first 27 days of May the American bombers already have showered a bigger weight of bombs on Nazi European targets than in any full month so far.

This month's activities resulted in the heaviest American losses, 49 big bombers.

But observers, considering the vastly expanded strength of the raiding forces, regarded the losses as not out of line with earlier ratios. In March, 17 American bombers were lost in nine raids covering 12 targets.

Ohio Legion Flays Moscow Picture As Totalitarian

Columbus, Ohio., May 27 (AP).—The executive committee of the Ohio Department, American Legion, asked the legion's national headquarters today to do "everything in its power to offset the damage to Americanism being done by the use of the motion picture 'Mission to Moscow.'"

In a statement issued from the office of J. J. Saslavsky, Ohio department adjutant, the legion said:

"The film 'Mission to Moscow' is not true, even to the text of the book by the same name, but in the words of Prof. John Dewey and Miss Suzanne La Follette is, in realty, "totalitarian propaganda for mass consumption.'"

Allies Loose Heaviest Raid On Lae Base

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in Australia (Friday), May 28.—The heaviest raid of the Southwest Pacific war was unleashed on the northeast New Guinea Japanese base at Lae yesterday by Mitchells, Liberators and Beaufighters. More than 28 tons of bombs rained down on the airdrome, dispersal areas and supply dumps, igniting huge fires.

In a sense it was retaliation for a sizeable raid by the Japanese the day before on our ground forces strung out along the north coast of New Guinea from Morobe, about 80 miles below Lae, to Douglas Harbor, above Buna. The enemy used about 31 planes, including bombers and fighters. Only slight damage was caused, today's communique said.

The obvious reason for yesterday's big raid is that the Japanese have succeeded in getting in reenforcements since the Battle of the Bismarck Sea in March during which Allied bombers destroyed an entire 22-ship convoy of men and supplies for Lae.

Yesterday's raid was opened by a force of Beaufighters which strafed the plantation, causing explosions and fires. A few minutes later, Liberators hit the airdrome and dispersal areas about the same time. Mitchells bombed the town and airdrome area.

Allied jungle fighters have infiltrated within less than 15 miles of Salamaua, presenting a ground menace both to that point and Lae.

Two enemy planes cought on the ground received direct hits on the airdrome.

Cherry Ceiling to Give Growers $40 More Ton

OPA yesterday announced it will set ceilings for the 1943 packs of cherries high enough to permit an increase of approximately $40 a ton to cherry growers. This increase to the growers is mandatory in the price control act.

For other 1943 canning crops so far put under ceilings, the 1942 levels were maintained by means of a subsidy paid to canners by the Commodity Credit Corporation.

"front line reporter's" account of recent fighting on the central front in which the correspondent said "we have gone through damned difficult days."

"The enemy," said the broadcast, "repeatedly was able to infiltrate with tanks into our positions. Immediate countermeasures are required. Wounded German soldiers were lying on the battlefield and had to be left there as the hospitals were overcrowded."

Russia's midnight bulletin told of minor action in various sectors in the Ukraine, Central and Northwestern Fronts, but said there was no material change in positions.

Two Axis garrisons were reported wiped out on the Kalinin Front northwest of Moscow, and on the Karelian Front opposite Finland.

Soviet artillery destroyed 15 blockhouses and dugouts on the Volkhov Front southeast of Leningrad.

Substandard Pay Ordered Raised

In its first award of a wage increase to correct "sub-standards of living" since President Roosevelt's "hold the line" order, of April 8, the War Labor Board yesterday ordered an average 10 cents an hour pay raise for 68 employes of the Everbest Engineering Corp., of New York City.

The board also ordered continuance of a union shop clause in the new contract, from which the industry members of the WLB dissented.

Ickes' Son, Rifle Champion, Enlists

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, May 27.—The multilingual lawyer son of Petroleum Coordinator Harold L. Ickes "fulfilled a lifelong ambition" here today when he was sworn into the United States Marine Corps as a private, first class.

"I had all my papers ready and would have joined the Marines last fall if the Justice Department hadn't sent me to South America," Raymond Wilmarth Ickes, 30, declared.

Ickes speaks Spanish, Portuguese and Italian—Spanish and Portuguese as fluently as English—and so was requested by the Department of Justice to undertake a special mission in South America last fall.

Ickes, who lives at 8847 Woodcliff Court, Silver Spring, will be on inactive duty until called to report to "boot camp" at Parris Island, S. C.

He said he has been shooting since he was "big enough to hold a gun" and won several State championships with the Springfield rifle.

Rationing Drives Man to Suicide Try

Yerplanck, N. Y., May 27 (AP).—August Martens, 72, was found by police with his throat slashed today. Near him, officers said, was a note reading, "I couldn't get along on the point system."

He was taken to Peekskill Hospital where authorities said he was expected to recover. Police said Martens, who lived alone, said in addition to his ration troubles, he was unable to buy any potatoes.

HOST: Ah-h now to relax. Next to letters from my boys at the front, I don't know of anything so comforting as a friendly chair . . . and a "tall one" made with Kinsey.

GUEST: No doubt about that, Bill. But tell me, how do you manage to hear so often from your sons?

HOST: This V-mail, George—something you and I never had when we served in France in '18. Goes through by plane—by ship, so fast that I and the boys can keep up a continuous correspondence. Another thing: 65-V letters travel as light as one of the old style. Great morale-builder, George—for them, for us.

GUEST: Funny I never thought of V-mail before—I'm going to switch to it at once. Yes, and after this taste of Kinsey, there's another switch I'm going to make—to Kinsey Whiskey.

MR. GAY 90'S: It was so in my day, too. One taste of Kinsey Whiskey always made a new friend, so distinguished is its flavor and quality. And, equally important, that quality is the same today as a half-century ago—because J. G. Kinsey, America's Oldest Living Distiller, still supervises its production.

Machinists' Union Breaks With A.F.L.

49-Year Affiliation Ended by Dispute Of Long Standing With Carpenters

The International Association of Machinists, a powerful union claiming 565,420 members, yesterday terminated 48 years of affiliation with the American Federation of Labor because of the refusal of the federation's executive council to resolve a bitter 29-year-old jurisdictional row with the A. F. of L. Carpenters' Union.

The action introduced new elements of uncertainty into an already confused organization picture of American labor, coming in the wake of the announcement that the 600,000 members of the United Mine Workers headed by John L. Lewis had applied for reaffiliation.

The development led one correspondent to comment that the door to the federation which President William Green has said is always open to welcome returning prodigals had now become a revolving door.

Effective Monday

The machinists' action, announced at a press conference by its president, Harvey W. Brown, will become effective on May 31.

Other labor developments yesterday include the following.

1. President Roosevelt held four successive conferences on labor questions amid indications that the Administration was eager that labor "unity" negotiations be resumed this summer to neutralize any possible political effects of Lewis' reentry into the federation—now a foregone conclusion.

The President's conferees included Philip Murray, president of the C. I. O.; David B. Robertson, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen; George Harrison, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, and Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, secretary of the A. F. L.-C. I. O. Labor War Board.

Printers May Reaffiliate

2. It was disclosed that the International Typographical Union, which left the A. F. of L. several years ago in a dispute over per capita payments to the federation, was preparing to take a vote on reaffiliation. Green told reporters that he understood that a sufficient number of I. T. U. locals had filed petitions to make the question the subject of a union referendum.

Informed observers predicted that the I. T. U. would vote to return to the federation.

3. Harrison said he was disappointed with the award of an 8-cent-an-hour increase to more than a million railroad workers, but said the unions would accept it.

4. Murray said he discussed with the President "the general economic situation here, particularly as it relates to wages, manpower, and war production."

Brown stated that he was announcing the machinists' withdrawal "with regret." The I. A. M., he added, would remain an independent union, rather than affiliate with the C. I. O.

Green also commented that he regretted the machinists' action, but expressed hope the jurisdictional differences could be patched up to permit their return soon.

Cites 1914 Ruling

The machinists have contended that a 1914 convention of the federation gave them the right to install and repair machinery, but that the federation's executive council has refused to enforce the convention order at the instance of William L. Hutcheson, head of the carpenters' union.

Brown said the council was following a policy of "appeasement" with respect to Hutcheson because of his threats to withdraw from the federation.

"If we are going to continue to get a beating, we are not going to pay for it," Brown said.

Brown estimated that 15,000 machinists have been compelled to "pay tribute" to other unions during the past few years—principally the carpenters to do "machinists' work."

Secret Ballot

Withdrawal was authorized by the machinists in a secret ballot referendum. The vote was announced as 78,811 to 20,179.

Holding important rights in a number of major war industries—principally aircraft and shipbuilding—the machinists have been regarded as one of the strongest of the pro-New Deal group in the federation. Hutcheson has been the leader of the Republican wing of the federation—a role that he will be expected to share with Lewis when he returns.

Pope Hits Naziism, Assures German Bishops of Better Times

Copyright, International News Service

New York, May 27.—The Vatican radio in a broadcast to Germany tonight made public a letter by Pope Pius XII in which he attacked Naziism and assured German bishops of the better times that are in wait for you."

The broadcast was reported by the United States Foreign Broadcast Intelligence Service. It followed by 24 hours another Vatican broadcast which denounced as propaganda the accusation by the Nazi-controlled Paris radio that the Catholic Church had "a crushing responsibility in unleashing the present war."

The letter was sent by the Pope on October 15, 1942, in response to a congratulatory letter from German bishops assembled in Fulda on the occasion of the Pope's twenty-fifth episcopal jubilee.

It deplored "the fact that many people tenaciously strive to do away with that ancient glory that hitherto we have so deeply admired—that is, to destroy that which the Christian religion has given to the German nation in the course of many centuries."

"Of this the Pope complains just have the German bishops," the broadcast declared, "and he praises the German shepherds who, together with Rome—(as the letter expresses it)—are doing everything within their power to erect a bastion against those wretched people who harbor such hostile and unjustified aversion to Christianity.

"The German bishops do not lose heart or confidence in this hard fight, but carry it on unafraid, buckled in the armor of truth and divine grace."

Declaring that "the Pope expresses the wish that the German bishops may be granted shrewdness without faintheartedness, valor without overbearing," the broadcast quoted the letter as saying:

"May particular energy guide your actions and led you on an unswerving course to the better times that are in wait for you."

Liberian President's Talks Set New Record for Brevity

By the Associated Press

A modest ruler of a tiny African republic paid his courtesy call to the United States Congress yesterday and shattered Capitol Hill records for brevity in speechmaking.

Here to return the post-Casablanca visit President Roosevelt made to his country, President Edwin Barclay of Liberia used but 28 words in addressing the Senate; not many more in bringing the greetings of his people to the House.

"I thank you very much," the Negro chief executive said in the Senate, "for according the high honor of permitting me to watch for a few minutes the process of lawmaking of the United States Senate." Then he sat down.

In the House, the descendant of one-time American slaves said his country had derived its constitution from this Nation and that its people were carrying out the democratic principles of government.

From the rostrum where Prime Minister Churchill only last week addressed Congress and the world, President Barclay echoed one underlying theme of that message—that the free peoples of the world must battle together to save democracy.

For, he declared, countries like his own cannot continue "unless we fight to preserve the principles of democratic government."

Last night President Barclay was the guest of Secretary of State Cordell Hull at the Carlton Hotel. Today at 11 a. m. he will visit Howard University, and then motor to Fort Belvoir. At 8:30 p. m. he will attend a concert at the Library of Congress by the Budapest Quartet.

President Barclay will speak today at 9:15 p. m. over Station WWDC. His talk will be extemporaneous and will be rebroadcast by OWI to Japan, India, China and North Africa.

breakdown in rationing.

Dealers were warned that they could expect practically no gasoline during the remainder of the present week.

Gasoline consumption in the city has been between 5 and 6 gallons a month for the last few months, but dealers can expect to get no more than 3,600,000 gallons a month for the next two months, they were advised.

Forbidden by OPA

McCarran's protest was in the form of a letter to Brown in which he stated that the District Medical Association had made arrangements for its members to get the needed gasoline from specified filling stations and the OPA had then specifically forbidden execution of the arrangement.

He said further that local doctors are now unable to get gasoline for their professional calls and they now must make their calls by use of the public transportation systems or abandon their usual rounds. The result is an appalling waste of professional manpower, he said. He also cited the additional strain that has been put upon medical men by the great drain on their ranks by demands of the armed services and criticized adding this additional burden.

"The situation," he said, "is not only anomalous but absurd."

Yesterday two filling stations in Silver Spring had some gasoline on hand but their tanks were pumped dry as quickly as they could service the long line of cars awaiting gas.

There may be spotted instances of filling stations receiving some gasoline during the remainder of this week, but they are expected to be rare.

One delivery a day—for three days—of flowers by retail florists, will be allowed during the Memorial Day weekend, the Office of Defense Transportation announced yesterday.

A florist may make one delivery on Saturday, one on Sunday, and one on Monday, and then only to cemeteries, places where religious services are being held and to patriotic gatherings. The new order is designed to save gasoline.

Fourth of Normal

Ralph K. Davies, Acting Petroleum Administrator for War, said he saw no possibility of a let up throughout the Eastern area for weeks. Stocks for civilian use have fallen to ¼ of normal, he said.

The District branch of the American Automobile Association, which usually keeps in close touch with the stations having gasoline for sale, reported yesterday that they abandoned this practice because by the time they had received the tip that a station had gasoline and were able to verify it, the station's tanks would be empty.

Wholesalers said that gas-hungry motorists were following their delivery trucks to their destinations and by the time a delivery truck would arrive, it would be followed by a line of 25 or more cars.

Delivery by Night

To circumvent them the wholesalers are now making deliveries to their retail stations at night—when they have any gasoline to deliver.

The ODT yesterday reiterated its former order to bus and taxi people to slash their mileage by 40 per cent. The order stated that in view of the time that had elapsed since issuance of the original order, they should have already effected a 20 per cent cut.

overtime would not become payable at time and a half rates until after 40 hours; the U. M. W. proposal provided for time and a half payment at the end of 35 hours—the miner's basic five-day week.

Also involved are possible determinations on whether "travel time" — now uncompensated — should be paid for at the basic pay rate or at some lower rate, whether one hour a day "travel time" is already being paid by virtue of the existence of a seven-hour day in coal mining, and whether 48 minutes or an hour and a half is the actual figure to be paid for.

WLB, in turning the question back to collective bargaining, made it clear that it would not approve any settlement that was not part of a settlement of the potential legal claim, a "hidden wage increase."

It was regarded as possible that WLB might trim an agreed settlement on the ground that it contained elements of a "hidden" boost.

Bridges Assails Power Commission And Its Chairman

The Federal Power Commission, in general, and its chairman, Leland Olds, in particular, yesterday were assailed on the Senate floor by Senator Bridges (Republican) of New Hampshire.

During debate on the $2,621,000,000 independent offices appropriation bill, Bridges described the commission as "largely a bureaucratic fifth wheel" and told the Senate that Olds has "Communist leanings" and possesses a "record unblemished by any stain of practical experience" for the position he holds.

Olds, said Bridges, was appointed to the commission by the New Deal as a "payoff" for support given Administration candidates by the American Labor Party.

"Please don't ride on a Southern Railway train this summer—unless you conscientiously believe that your trip is necessary."
But that time has come .... an inescapable by-product of our Nation's fight for Victory!
You see, the Southern serves the South—and the South is serving the Nation as the location of many important war industries going at top speed and more than half of all the larger training camps and military establishments in the country.
This means simply that our passenger facilities this summer will undoubtedly be strained to the limit.
Many of our passenger cars and locomotives will be assigned to troop movements.
Our regular trains and our stations are bound to be literally jammed with men and women in uniform, traveling under orders and on furlough, and civilians traveling in connection with war work.
We're going to do our level best to handle this heavy load, including those civilians who conscientiously believe that they must travel.
But, until our trains and stations are no longer over-crowded by essential travel, we hope that you will patriotically forego all unnecessary travel over our lines.
I never thought the time would come... but it's here ... and I know that we can rely on your cooperation and understanding.

Congress Opens Drive To Wreck OPA

tangent at subsidized prices by prohibiting use of commodity credit machinery to subsidize costs to the consumer.

The latter move brought a prompt warning from War Food Administrator Davis. Davis told the Senate Banking Committee: "I think it would be dangerous to attach too much importance to the subsidy label, and line the people of the country up in hostile camps, one pro-subsidy, the other anti-subsidy."

Price Administrator Brown likewise had put in a busy week before the House Deficiencies Committee in an effective effort to save the life of his agency. Brown's testimony, in executive session, was reported to have favorably impressed the subcommittee, but failed to stem demands for deeper cuts in personnel and suspension of subsidy programs.

As one member of the subcommittee put it, "all of the members think Mr. Brown is a good man and is trying to do a good job. But Mr. Brown is a better man than his agency. The trouble is in the law and in OPA. Probably no one could make it work."

Congressional criticism went deeper than the current kick back against subsidies and was aimed chiefly at some of the Washington and regional personnel carried over from the old Henderson set-up. Republican members complained of what they called the "long-haired boys and professors." Democrats criticized continuance of "Republican" regional officials originally appointed by Henderson. OPA critics agreed Brown's reorganization moves had done much to meet their demands, but insisted they came "too late."

Showdown Battle for Power Flares Between Top OPA Men

was at one time regarded as a key man, whose "know-how" of business methods would help Brown over many a bump.

Maxon has indicated to friends that he is tired of OPA's obvious lack of any clear-cut policy and would like the chance of putting the agency on a businesslike basis. Galbraith, former assistant professor of economics at Princeton University, is said to have expressed the belief that Maxon's proposed policies would wreck price control and cause inflation.

Brown to "Pick One"

Brown, pressed for details as to the winner in the fight, testily declared that he would "pick one and let the other go." But, he added, he would not have anything specific on the matter for about two weeks.

Later, however, some officials at OPA strongly hinted that Galbraith was "in," at least for the time being, while they said Brown really no longer cares whether Maxon stays on.

Maxon, it was said, has for several weeks been pressing Brown for "a more important job than clipping the newspapers for OPA items."

Although neither Galbraith nor Maxon could be reached for comment, it was said that Maxon was given the opportunity to think over whether to stay on as information chief or return to Detroit. Maxon, before entering Brown's office, showed reporters that he had already cleared his desk to be ready for anything, presumably a turn-down by Brown.

But Brown, jovial and adroit in evading searching questions, preferred to emphasize that there have been many "absurd statements about OPA's breakdown." He said he himself was not conscious of any such "breakdown."

Referring to recent resignations, he said he felt that an organization of some 160,000 persons "can stand the resignation of five or six or even 40 or 50 people."

Asked whether rumors that he was planning to leave OPA were true, Brown declared that he was going to stay—"I would not walk out on the President now."

ELITE'S DRY CLEANING SERVICE

Is Again Ready to Serve You

Last week we were forced to discontinue this popular service, as a result of labor shortage and too much business in this feverish war capital.

Today, thanks to the patience and good sportsmanship of our customers, we've caught up—and are ready to again serve certain of your Dry Cleaning needs. Please note, however, that this restored service is limited to Men's and Women's and Children's Apparel—

- We Are Not Yet Prepared to Accept Household Dry Cleaning, Including Curtains, Draperies, Upholstery and Similar Heavy Articles.

We must ask your cooperation, not to swamp us with Apparel. For example, if you have several heavy Suits and Overcoats to be cleaned—send one or two this week—one or two next week, and so on. Mix 'em up with lighter garments—not too many of one kind at one time. That gives us a break—also gives a break to the other fellow who wants ELITE Service, too. And that, after all, is the traditional American idea of fair play. Thanks again, and lots of 'em!

- YOU MUST BRING A GARMENT HANGER FOR EACH GARMENT.

Sorry to make this a "must." But you'll have to blame Adolf and Benito and Tojo. We simply can't get new Hangers—the material has gone to war. So no fooling—there must be one Garment Hanger for each and every garment brought in for Dry Cleaning—not one Hanger for several garments. Thanks, for your understanding and cooperation.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

Justice Department Presses "Cartel" Suit

IT HASN'T leaked out yet, but the Justice Department is on the trail of another big anti-trust case which is going to create headlines—if the War Department doesn't intervene.

This time the giant National Lead Co. is involved.

The case is similar to the deals of Standard of New Jersey and the Aluminum Corp. before the war to control synthetic rubber and magnesium in cooperation with Nazi cartels. In the National Lead case, Japanese as well as GeGrman business connections were concerned.

The deal was to control the production of titanium, a rare substance essential to the manufacture of paint, also to the cutting edge of tools.

The Justice Department has unearthed documents showing that National Lead had an agreement with I. G. Farbenindustrie of Germany whereby, if war came, Nazi patents would be so held by National Lead in this country that they would not be seized by the Alien Property Custodian, but could be transferred back to Germany after the war.

This is not the first time National Lead has been under fire for its international business activities. For many years before the war, it cooperated with the big British-Dutch tin combine which forced the United States to ship raw tin all the way round the world from Singapore or Bolivia to England to be smelted, then back to the United States.

It took months of inter-government jockeying before Pearl Harbor to persuade government friends of National Lead to build a tin smelter in the U. S. A. so this country would be independent of the international tin cartel.

Fletcher Rockwell, president of National Lead, is also chairman of the board of Patino Mines and Enterprises, the company organized by the big Bolivian tin king, Patino.

Note: Whether the War Department now steps in to block the Justice Department remains to be seen. Undersecretary of War Patterson has writhed in agony and protested to the White House when the Justice Department has tried to prosecute various big business combines whose products are essential to the war effort.

Merry-Go-Round

The only time Churchill ever was booed on the floor of Commons was when he made his famous speech in the winter of 1936 defending the present Duke of Windsor's right to marry Wally and remain King of England . . . Only a handful of labor is coming up from the Bahamas to work in the U. S. A., so the Duke merely made that the excuse for his recent talk with Churchill here. Actually he wants to get back to London. . . . Inside fact is that the OPA opposed liberalizing the coffee ration, had to be blackjacked into it by the coffee industry. At present, large quantities of coffee are entering the country from the Caribbean countries because of improved submarine conditions. But OPA feared the submarine menace might get worse, curtail coffee. Then the public would be confused at having to cut its coffee ration again . . . Residents of Martinique are deserting that French island in small boats as if it were a sinking ship. Tyrannical Vichyite Admiral Robert sends patrol planes out to try to stop them.

More Canned Goods

HOUSEWIVES who will get more canned goods this summer can thank the Senate's Truman Committee. No one announced it officially, but it was due to their probing that the Army recently released 30 million cases of canned fruits and vegetables for civilian use.

The Truman Committee had revealed the fact that huge quantities of canned goods were being hoarded or unwisely used by the Army, when fresh vegetables were easily available. Especially revealing was the cross-examination of Gen. E. B. Gregory, the Army's quartermaster general, by Senator Brewster of Maine.

"Why does the Army feed canned grapefruit to its troops in Miami," asked Brewster, "when grapefruit is growing fresh all over Florida?"

"Because the men are too lazy to prepare fresh grapefruit," was General Gregory's frank reply.

He also admitted that green vegetables and fruits were readily available to Army camps during a large part of the year, but that Army commissaries purchased canned goods because it was easier to prepare than fresh vegetables.

The Truman Committee also ascertained that the Army was hoarding canned tomatoes equivalent to about 125 cans per soldier as against about 5 cans for every civilian per year. In fact, the amount of canned goods on hand for a 10 million man Army was about the same as the amount expected to feed 130 million civilians.

The Truman Committee also found that as a result of this hoarding the packers and canners were in a quandry and expected to curtail production.

Red Arrows Hit the Bull's Eye: And we're not talking about the arrows that come in the archery sets now decorating many Washington lawns. Nor the kind that William Tell used to split the apple on Junior's head in the opera. We mean the Red Arrows now appearing on the Fare Boxes on Capital Transit Street

Cars and Buses. Their frank purpose is to point the way for speedier rides and less confusion by dropping your dime or token in Fare Box yourself. And by the way, these Red Arrows should be especially helpful to newcomers who were accustomed back home to having fares collected by hand. For here in Washington, you see, operators are not permitted to accept fares from passengers. In fact, all fares must be dropped in Fare Box by the rider when boarding vehicle. Here's another case of little things doing a big job in wartime Washington. Follow the Arrow—drop your fare in Fare Box yourself—help avoid confusion, misunderstanding, irritation—get to your destination quicker.

Sprays Are Not All For Sore Throats: We have machines in our shops that do master spraying jobs. Not like those gadgets you keep in the bathroom cabinet. Our machines spray hot metal on worn parts of equipment, axles, bearings, pump shafts, what not. In the old days such parts when they became worn had to be replaced with new ones . . . now almost impossible to get. With the spraying machines however, we build the worn parts up good as new. Funny thing about those machines. At two inches, about the usual operating distance, the metal is molten. At two feet it won't burn your hand. The particles are exceedingly fine and the air cools them quickly.

Northern Presbyterians Elect Dr. Henry S. Coffin Moderator

Detroit, May 27 (AP).—The Rev. Henry Sloane Coffin of New York, president of Union Theological Seminary, was elected moderator of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America (Northern branch) by the 155th general assembly here this afternoon.

DR. COFFIN

Dr. Coffin was elected by a vote of 291 to 159 over the Rev. George Harold Talbott, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Passaic, N. J. He succeeds the Rev. Stuart Nye Hutchison of Pittsburgh.

A member of the church's Board of National Missions, Dr. Coffin was a pastor in New York from 1904 to 1926. He is a grauate of Yale University and of the seminary he has headed since 1926.

Earlier, the Rev. Mr. Hutchison said that the war "is quickening the social consciousness" of the people. He pointed to the United States' relations with China as an example of a "widening social horizon."

Montreat, N. C., May 27 (AP).—Dr. Donald W. Richardson of Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Va., tonight was elected moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of the United States (Southern Branch), succeeding the Rev. Charles G. Rose of Fayetteville, N. C.

Dr. Richardson, who has been professor of missions and comparative religions at Union since 1928, was named on the second ballot. He is a native of South Carolina, served as missionary to China from 1910 to 1928, and is the author of several books. He was graduated from Davidson College in 1902.

Preceding the election, an Army chaplain told the Assembly here that "America must be humbled lest she be destroyed before she can be used by God."

The appeal for national humility was sounded by the Rev. Ben Lacy Rose, regimental chaplain of the 115th Cavalry at Camp Hood, Tex., who was named to preach the opening of the eighty-third General Assembly by his father, the retiring moderator.

The chaplain said America had a great destiny, not only with her armies but with her leadership among nations of the earth but, he asserted, that "unless she is humbled God cannot use her for a great mission."

He urged the commissioners (delegates) present to consider themselves "prophets of the Lord," and declared, "the final destiny of this country is not in the hands of her military leaders but in the hands of her prophets."

Fear and Anxiety Found to Produce Poison in Blood

New York, May 27 (AP).—Discovery of a poisonous substance which appears suddenly in human blood during fear and anxiety was reported to the New York Academy of Medicine today.

The nature of the stuff is unknown. But its existence was definitely proven by its effects on rabbit tissues in test tubes. The tissues were from rabbit intestines and were kept alive artificially.

A bit of blood of human beings with the jitters never failed to upset and change the normal rhythm of contraction of these rabbit tissues. The blood of humans without emotional disturbances never had any effect.

Family Plans Private Rites For Dr. Burks

Private funeral services will be held in New York for Dr. Barbara Stoddard Burks, 40, who died Tuesday in a plunge from the George Washington Bridge. Dr. Burks, sister of Mrs. Frank C. Newman of 2 Ridge Road Southeast, was well known here and throughout the country as a research phychologist and geneticist.

Dr. Burks, for the past two years a member of the psychology department of Columbia University, was a member of the American Psychological Association. She was editor of the Bulletin for Phychological Study of Social Issues and head of a committee to aid displaced foreign phychologists. She had been ill for several months.

Since 1929, when she received a doctor of psychology degree at Stanford University, Doctor Burks had devoted much of her research work to the "nature versus nurture" question—the relative influence of heredity and environment in shaping human conduct.

Among her most widely acclaimed works was the study of the heredity of intelligence in which adopted children were found to resemble their foster parents less closely than true children their true parents.

Dr. Burks recently received a Guggenheim fellowship for completing a study of identical twins reared apart.

Besides her sister, Dr. Burks leaves her mother, Mrs. Frances W. Burks, of Palo Alto, Calif.

Kenneth O'Connor Fatally Stricken In Office Here

Kenneth O'Connor, member of an old Washington family and a veteran of two wars, died of a heart attack last night. An employe of the Shipyard Labor Relations Division of the United States Maritime Commission, he was stricken at 9:30 p. m. in his office in the Evans Building.

Mr. O'Connor, brother of George O'Connor, Washington's well known businessman and singer, lived in the Flagler Apartments, 736 Twenty-second Street Northwest. He was 69 and a bachelor.

He was born in Washington February 19, 1874, son of Capt. P. E. O'Connor, a veteran of the Union Army, and Ellen M. O'Connor.

In addition to George O'Connor, he is survived by another brother, Dr. Charles E. O'Connor. He was a member of the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars. The funeral will be held Saturday, but arrangements had not been completed last night.

Private Services Planned Today For Edsel Ford

Detroit, May 27 (AP).—The body of Edsel Bryant Ford, president of the Ford Motor Co., lay in state for approximately 12 hours today in a midtown funeral chapel while persons of all stations in life paid him final tribute.

Tomorrow private funeral services will be held at 2:30 p. m., Eastern war time, in Christ Church Chapel Grosse Pointe, not far from the Edsel Ford home, where the 49-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford died early yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford were among those who came to the chapel today. They were followed by Mrs. Edsel Ford, who was accompanied by her sons and daughter, Lieut. Henry Ford 2d, U. S. N.; Benson Ford of the Army; William Clay Ford, a naval cadet, and Mrs. Walter Buhl Ford 2d.

From President Roosevelt came this message to Henry Ford:

"Please accept for yourself and for all who mourn with you this assurance of heartfelt sympathy, in which Mrs. Roosevelt joins."

Rovensky Leaving Post With Rockefeller Unit

Joseph C. Rovensky, assistant coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, is resigning effective May 31 to return to the Chase National Bank, it was learned yesterday, after three years with the CIAA's office, headed by Nelson Rockefeller.

Mr. Rovensky has headed the commercial and financial affairs of CIAA since its inception in July, 1940. His successor will not be announced until Mr. Rockefeller returns from a trip to Mexico City, where a spokesman said he was on "office business" with Francis A. Jamison, head of the CIAA press section, and John McClintock, assistant for basic economic studies.

Senate Votes $200,000 for Postwar Planning

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

The Senate yesterday voted to administer a dose of slow-acting poison to the National Resources Planning Board, ignoring repeated entreaties from President Roosevelt that the agency be kept alive to ease the country through postwar economic crises.

The chamber refused to allow the board, whose chairman is Mr. Roosevelt's uncle, Frederic A. Delano, more than $200,000 for the next fiscal year, a sum admittedly inadequate to maintain it as an effective planning agency even in skeleton form.

The Senate's action came on two roll call votes that preceded its passage of a $2,621,000,000 independent offices appropriation bill which will be sent to conference as the House, in approving the measure, cut out all funds for the board.

Rejected 43 to 31

The Senate first rejected, on a 43 to 31 recorded vote, a proposal by the acting chairman of its Appropriations Committee, Senator McKellar (Democrat) of Tennessee, that the board be allowed $534,422, a sum equivalent to the money Congress voted it for administrative expenses in the current fiscal year.

On a separate roll call, the Senate then voted 44 to 31 to accept a decision by the committee to amend the House bill by allowing the board $200,000.

Twenty-six Republicans, all but four of the minority party members voting, joined with 17 Democrats in voting down the McKellar amendment, which was supported by 26 Democrats and 1 Progressive.

On the second roll call, the Republican Party line was broken. Twelve Republicans, one Progressive and 31 Democrats voted for the committee amendment. Nineteen Republicans and 12 Democrats opposed it.

In another major departure from the House bill, the Senate upheld its Appropriations Committee's decision to raise the appropriation for the Home Owners Loan Corporation from the House figure of $8,310,734 to $12,142,200. It was the intention of the House to force HOLC into rapid liquidation. It was the verdict of the Senate that the House figure would liquidate the agency so speedily that the Government would lose money.

In voting more funds to HOLC, the Senate accepted an amendment by Senator Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia, which would require the agency to submit to Congress a plan for its own liquidation by July 1, 1945, and semiannual reports on liquidation progress.

Atherholt Named Citizens' President

Gordon M. Atherholt was elected president of the MacArthur Boulevard Citizens Association last night at its meeting in Palisades Field House. Others named were James L. Parsons, first vice president; R. H. Blatter, second vice president; Mrs. Dorthy McGhee, recording secretary; R. D. Hudson, corresponding secretary; Cole E. Johnston, treasurer; and C. E. McGhee and Gordon M. Atherholt, delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

The association also voted to petition District officials to lower streetcar tracks at Galena Place and Cathedral Avenue Northwest and to ask for tar and gravel in the alley back of the 5500 block of MacArthur Boulevard.

43 Drivers Caught At New Stop Sign

Thirteen motorists were given traffic tickets last night at Fourth and Franklin Streets Northeast, on charges of having run through a newly installed stop sign there. The officers watching the intersection are Pvts. Paul H. Bixler and William B. Riley of the Traffic Division.

On the night before police booked charges against 30 motorists for ignoring the sign. A number of accidents, including recent fatalities, is the reason for the installation of the sign.

Fine Points of Women's Hosiery Studied in Brand Name Inquiry

In the course of investigating Government restrictions on brand names and newsprint, a House subcommittee which learned the other day about a shortage in men's shorts, studied the finer points of women's rayon hosiery yesterday.

The stockings, minus models, were displayed by the manager of a Lancaster, Pa., department store, in an effort to show the injustices done consumers as well as manufacturers in OPA's attempts to substitute grade labeling for brand names.

At the outset Representative Halleck (Republican) of Indiana asked whether the removal of trade marks and brand names was not really an undercover attempt by OPA to control the press and radio by killing off the advertising which supports them.

Destroys Advertising

It had been pointed out by committee witness that if manufacturers could no longer identify their products by brand names there would be no incentive to advertise.

Singled out for special attack yesterday was Dr. J. K. Galbraith, deputy OPA administrator in charge of price control, who was downtown threatening to resign from the agency because of internal difficulties there even while witnesses on Capitol Hill were voicing indictments of his policies.

Lew Hahn, general manager of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, in a statement before the committee said:

"In one short year, the OPA has achieved more in the creation of confusion, misunderstanding and the unwarranted regimentation of business and the public, than drafters of the price control act ever could have foreseen—and now, as all observers must know, it is in the act of committing hara-kiri."

Book Exhibited

Hahn said Galbraith favored destruction of the "price jurisdiction" of the country's manufacturers, and quoted from a book of which Galbraith was the author which said in effect that manufacturers increased their price jurisdiction by adopting brand names for their products.

Galbraith's book, published in 1937, was added to the hosiery as an exhibit.

Contributing to the education of the committee in hosiery was Irving C. Fox, general counsel of the National Dry Goods Association.

Fox said in his opinion there's no such thing as a guarantee that rayon hosiery will last any length of time, once it is worn.

"It is almost a fraud on the public, perpetrated by the United States Government," Fox asserted, "to say this is a Grade 'A' product and women can wear it for a certain length of time."

Chicago University Head Fears Postwar Mediocrity in Colleges

Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, expressed concern yesterday over the possibility that the various programs of education now being conducted by the Army in colleges and universities may reduce these institutions of learning to mediocrity after the war.

This process of "education by contract," or "education supervised by the Government," as he put it, could very well have the effect of destroying the initiative and freedom of our higher schools of learning, he feels, by placing in Government hands all responsibility for its form and content.

President Hutchins is all for the Army's Specialized Training Program, however, since in his opinion the techniques employed are showing our schools a more intelligent and economical approach to the education of young men.

Answering a recent critic of the program, he declared that it is not designed to be an educational program and should not be judged as such. As a military program, it must be judged by the contribution it makes in the training of better officers and men. This, he believes, it will do as the program develops, and at the same time "it can point some very necessary lessons to the educational system as a whole," he said.

Of course, President Hutchins acknowledged, the postwar effect might follow along the lines taken by the NYA, where schools were used and subsidized to keep young people off the labor market during critical economic periods.

In the same sense, he thought, colleges might be used by the Government to participate in what he calls "selective demobilization" of the armed forces, so as to relieve inevitable pressure on the economic structure of the country immediately following cessation of hostilities.

President Hutchins was interviewed as he stepped from a plane on his way to attend the annual dinner of the University of Chicago Club of Washington last night at Pierce Hall.

Mississippi At New High In Missouri

By the Associated Press

The mighty Mississippi piled up to a record height at Cape Girardeau, Mo., yesterday at its history-making flood crest surged downstream on what may be the last stretch of its unbridled destruction.

The Ohio River, usually a devastating partner, was comparatively docile, and Army engineers said the flood waters would have no great effect below Cairo, Ill., where the two streams join.

However, for 218 miles from Cairo back along its course to the mouth of the gorged Illinois River, the Mississippi was spread over hundreds of thousands of acres of farm lands, washing out crops.

Davies Receives Stalin's Reply

said the talk turned to the way the German radio had commented on the dissolution of the Comintern.

"We kidded Stalin about that," he said, adding that Stalin's reaction was "it's a good thing—let them stew."

He also disclosed that Stalin is still talking about the American movie, "Mission to Moscow."

"He particularly liked Walter Huston.

Davies paid high tribute to Admiral William H. Standley, United States Ambassador to Moscow.

Davies' visit to Moscow has received wide attention from Soviet newspapers. Yesterday the official government paper Izvestia spread a four-column picture on its front page showing Stalin, Davies and Molotov. The Communist party newspaper Pravada published two pictures in one of the biggest displays ever given to a foreigner in wartime.

Small Business Essential to U. S., Jones Testifies

Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones told the Senate Commerce Committee yesterday that preservation of small business "is essential to a democracy."

Jones agreed with a statement by Senator Clark (Democrat) of Missouri that some Government agencies have dealt primarily with large business concerns during the war.

"At the beginning of the war, particularly, it was easier to deal with big business and it was the surest way to get quickly what was required," Jones said.

"However, at present, industry is doing a good job, supplies with few exceptions are coming along smoothly and they now have more time to spread the work around to small business."

He said he was "highly in favor" of a measure by Senator Wiley (Republican) of Wisconsin to provide for an Assistant Secretary of Commerce for small business, and one by Senator Mead (Democrat) of New York to aid small business by collection and dissemination of specific business management practices.

Emmons to Leave Hawaii; May Get San Francisco Post

Honolulu, May 27 (AP).—Lieut. Gen. Delos C. Emmons announced today that Brig. Gen. Robert C. Richardson would replace him as commander of the Hawaiian Department of the United States Army on June 1.

Asked if he might replace Lieut. Gen. John L. Dewitt, commander of the Western Defense Command and the Fourth Army, whose transfer from San Francisco had been rumored, General Emmons said he was unable to announce his new post, but that "there wouldn't be a more pleasant place to serve" than San Francisco.

(In San Francisco, Representative Richard J. Welch (Republican) of California said in an interview this week it was his understanding that General Dewitt was to be transferred because of differences with the War Department on the question of readmitting Japanese to the West Coast. Welch added he also understood that General Emmons would replace him.)

Congress' Power To Fire Officials To Be Forum Topic

The power of Congress to discharge officials will be considered by speakers on the American Forum of the Air, to be broadcast Sunday, at 8:45 p. m. over Station WOL and nationally over the Mutual network.

Speakers will discuss action of the Kerr subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee in connection with 39 Government officials accused of being or having been members of subversive organizations.

Representatives Clinton P. Anderson of New Mexico, and Joe Hendricks of Florida, will support Congress' right to power while Representatives George E. Outland of California, and James F. O'Connor of Montana, will oppose their view. All are Democrats.

also added the year 1937 to the other three base years, 1938, 1939, 1940, used for computing windfall taxes.

Clarification Move

In a move to clarify the 75 per cent abatement plan, the conferees added a provision so that persons whose taxes for the year of forgiveness were between $5, and $66.67 would be assured at least $50 abatement. Those whose tax was $50 or less in the year of abatement would have it entirely erased.

From $66.67 on up, 75 per cent of the year's tax would be abated. Conferees made clear that taxpayers would not get $50 in addition to the 75 per cent abatement.

10,000 Italians Flee Homes for Mountains

Stockholm, May 27 (AP).—Their homes in southern Italy blasted by Allied bombs, 10,000 Italians are in flight to mountain villages to escape further raids, the Rome correspondent for the Dagens Nyheter reported today.

The correspondent wrote that the refugees were receiving preference over vacationers in resorts and hotels along the way.

Navy Yards Seek Mechanics Not Now So Employed

Skilled mechanics, helpers, and laborers who are not now working in these fields, should apply for work in West Coast Navy Yards, Hawaii, and Panama, the Civil Service Commission announced yesterday.

Details may be obtained at the branch office of the Fourth U. S. Civil Service Region, 801 E Street Northwest, or from the civil service representative at the D. C. Employment Center, 501 K Street Northwest. The center will be open until 9:30 p. m. next Wednesday and Thursday to accommodate those not free during the day.

Those appointed will receive free transportation from Washington to places of employment. Physical examinations will be made free by medical officers at the Washington Navy Yard.

Ginsburg Files Missing; House Investigators Demand Return of OPA Papers

respondence was in the general files.

Emerson revealed that Ginsburg had spent four evenings, from about seven to midnight, sorting papers and loading files into his automobile. Some of the files removed, he asserted, contained papers Ginsburg had brought over from the SEC, where he was formerly employed.

Pressed hard as to why he had not sought to retrieve all the Ginsburg material from the various files at OPA in answer to the committee's subpena, Emerson said it would be a pretty difficult and complicated job.

Chairman Smith (Democrat) of Virginia interrupted sharply to say:

"Nobody on this committee was born yesterday. If he can't bring these files here let's get someone who can. We know there's a filing system in that agency and the papers can be found by somebody."

Representative Jennings (Democrat) of Tennessee brought out under questioning that when the new general counsel for OPA came into office he had no files from which to work.

Another disappearance of a document is being investigated by the committee. Counsel Harold Allen said yesterday the committee is still searching for the Deacon report on the operation of OPA rent control, but is not yet in possession of it.

Frank Edward Manuel, chief of the program and analysis of OPA's rent branch, at a salary of $6500 was the last witness of the afternoon.

Counsel Allen asked him if he was aware that after he was appointed to the position by Leon Henderson, a position which makes him one of the four policy making officials in regard to rent control, the Civil Service Commission had reported that "this applicant is not suitable and his employment should be terminated."

Manuel said he was not aware of the Civil Service report. Allen commented that since it was a direct Henderson appointment there was nothing Civil Service could do about it.

Manuel said that at one time he had been educational director of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee, C. I. O., and had taught labor and social security laws to workers.

Under questioning he admitted that he had "been in difficulty" with the Internal Revenue for failing to file income tax returns from 1933 to 1939, and had subsequently filed delinquent returns.

Allen commented that he hoped Manuel had not attempted to explain the internal revenue laws to the workers. He said he had not.

Manuel said he had received his bachelor's, master's and doctorate degrees from Harvard University, had been connected with the Federal Writers Project and had gone to Spain early in 1936 as a correspondent for The Nation.

He spent two months in Spain, he said, and subsequently had written a book, "The Politics of Modern Spain," which was published in 1938.

'Assignment in Brittany' New Star's Capitol Vehicle

Familiar Story Introduces New Player In Pierre Aumont, Heading Able Cast; All-Star Vaudeville Bill on the Stage

"ASSIGNMENT IN BRITTANY." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the novel by Helen MacInnes, adapted to the screen by Anthony Veiller, William H. Wright and Howard Emmett Rogers, co-starring Pierre Aumont and Susan Peters, with Richard Whorf, Margaret Wycherly, Signe Hasso, Reginald Owen, John Emery, George Coulouris, Sarah Padden, Miles Mander, George Brest and Darryl Hickman; Directed by Jack Conway. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

A WELL ENOUGH ACTED and reasonably tense spy story, cut to a pattern that has become familiar through frequent use of late, is unfolded in M-G-M's "Assignment in Brittany," chief screen feature of the new week's bill at Loew's Capitol Theater.

If the picture has an element of distinction in its favor, it is in the introduction of Pierre Aumont to Washington audiences as a capable new leading man—he is billed, I believe, as a star—with something in the manner of his speech that suggests Maurice Chevalier, long absent from the American cinema scene.

The story is the one of the commando officer, sent to occupied France to impersonate a Franco-Nazi traitor and secure vital information as to the whereabouts and method of operation of a submarine base on the French coast. His mission is romantically and melodramatically complicated by the necessity of deceiving not only the Quisling's mother, but two young women of divergent interests and purposes into believing that he is the lovelight of their lives. In the case of one of them—the staunch patriot, needless to say—it is true. The other is strictly a child of traitorous expediency, whose perfidy turns out to be of not too much consequence in the final sensational settling of accounts, since our side wins.

This eminently satisfactory rounding up of all the devious ramifications of plot is explosively consummated in the sort of commando raid that already has more or less worn out its welcome in such releases as "Commandos Strike at Dawn," "Next of Kin" and others of the current exhibits that rely on the suddenness and skill of surprise attack for the dramatic dynamite needed to blast the spectator into last-reel enthusiasm.

This is not to imply that "Assignment in Brittany" is not a well-conceived and well-wrought addition to the long list of films that have followed the same formula and pursued the identical course. Only that it arrives a shade too late to impress the spectator as something that blazes a new and nerve-tingling trail. The pace of the action is well and rapidly sustained, under the direction of Jack Conway, as Captain Metard, masquerading as Bertrand Corlay, attempts to resume his ostensible residence in the little French village and immediately becomes involvd in the hare-and-hounds sort of complexities that must confront any single operative matching his wits against the best of the Nazi military and Gestapo. Seemingly traitorous villagers turn out to be ardent patriots, and vice versa, and consequent events run through the usual catalogue of German brutalities, native heroics and the eventual destruction of the U-boat base under the shrewd direction of the youth who motivates the entire development of the script contrived by Anthony Veiller, William H. Wright and Howard Emmett Rogers from the novel of the same name by Helen MacInnes. Frequently, during the exciting and sometimes harrowing action, it does not come amiss that the audience should break into spontaneous applause.

A New "Star" and Notable Cast

As the dissembling "star" of the story, Pierre Aumont gives an unusually able account of himself for a newcomer to roles of prime importance in pictures designed for high rating. There is a poise and stability about him that adds appreciably to the conviction he is able to impart to a role which, at this juncture, unfortunately cannot be looked upon as anything quite approaching a "creative" effort. The youthful and personable Mons. Aumont, at least, refuses to mar his performance by such extravagances as might have tempted a less skillful actor to annoying exaggerations. Susan Peters, as chief romantic interest, fails to match the effectiveness of her reading with a comparable warmth of performance, thereby permitting Signe Husso to walk off with the more flamboyant of the feminine honors. As the mother who was not deceived, but patriotic enough not to betray the alien posing as her son, Margaret Wycherly contributes one of her typically able portrayals. Among the Nazis, George Coulouris and John Emery acquit themselves best, with Reginald Owen, Richard Whorf and Master Darryl Hickman measuring up best among the supporting players.

The "Capitol Varieties" stage revue is straight vaudeville of the better grade. All of the four acts are headliners by virtue of occupancy of the top spot on unnumbered bills down the years. Don Colleano, foremost of the tight-wire artists, it is who is called upon to open the proceedings. On stage or under the "big tops," Colleano is the recognized master. Reappearing as a "single" after too long an absence, Gus Van, of the illustrious former team of Van & Schenck, again proves himself among the great of the surviving singing character comedians in a group of songs that give his talents a wide range of expression in practically all the dialects there are. Jesse Block and Eve Sully, like Van, too infrequent in their visits, revive the enthusiastic acclaim that always has attended their comicalities in song and patter on local rostrums, and The Colstons, eccentric comedy dancers, score as is their habit before the final curtains close.

Sam Jack Kaufman's overture, featuring Lynn Allison's soprano and Helene's virtuosity on the violin—both to thunderous applause—Art Brown's organized songfest and the customary house features supplement a major attraction that suffers only from its belatedness—and not too much, even so.

A Ticklish Moment for a Commando

PIERRE AUMONT, SIGNE HASSO, JOHN EMERY, from left, three of the principal figures in "Assignment in Brittany," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's film story of a young Commando on a hazardous mission in occupied France, now occupying the screen at Loews Capitol Theater. Susan Peters, Richard Whorf, Margaret Wycherly, Reginald Owen and George Coulouris are among numerous other notables in the cast

'Prelude to War,' at Columbia, Reiterates a Timely Warning

By Marjorie Kelly

Probably the most forceful and complete pictorial answer yet attempted to the question, "What are we fighting for—and against?" is the OWI-U. S. Army's "Prelude to War."

"Prelude," main feature of a bill of considerable length and quality which opened yesterday at Loew's Columbia Theater, was produced under direction of Lieut. Col. Frank Capra. Walter Houston is the narrator, binding together with his quietly emphatic commentary a series of film sequences which defines powerfully the nature and aims of the enemy.

The films used are American-made and Allied newsreels, and captured enemy footage. The earliest ones are the records of the invasion of Manchuria, as we are reminded that the war had its real beginning there. From that event the activities of Fascist states are traced to the present.

There is an appalling splendor about the reiterated scenes of Fascist armies marching, and Fascist mobs shouting "Sieg Heil! Sieg Heil! Sieg Heil!" or "Duce! Duce! Duce!" It is an ominous thing to see and to hear—portentous in its religious fervor. We haven't any comparable enthusiasm, even in these latter days of realization of what it is that has been going on in Europe and in the Far East during our years of nonintervention.

Contains a Warning.

There is splendor in that mass ecstasy, and a warning, the way it looks from here.

The warning is picked up in one of the accompanying short subjects, "Plan for Destruction," which reveals the Fasicst blueprint for the division of the world, according to the teachings of Maj. Gen. Prof. Dr. (no kidding—that's really his title) Karl Haushoffer, Hitler's geopolitical sidekick. "They didn't leave us anything but Shangri-La," says the commentary, which emphasizes throughout that, although things are going badly at present for the Herrenvolk and the honorary Aryans, still the struggle is nowise ended, and we must not repeat the enemy's mistake of premature self-congratulation.

"Flame" Renews Run

The other feature on the current bill is "Keeper of the Flame," which was previously shown here a few weeks ago at the Palace. Starring Katharine Hepburn and Spencer Tracy, the film tells a melodramatic story of a great American hero who dies under circumstances that look increasingly suspicious to a journalist gathering material for a book about him. Enlisting the cooperation of the hero's family, he is troubled by an increasing conviction that they could have prevented the accident in which he died, but had some secret reason for wishing him dead.

Both Spencer Tarcy, as the journalist, and Miss Hepburn, as the dead hero's wife, give polished and sensitive performances, and the film has some moments of great emotional power, despite a not altogether effective ending.

Beside the short subject above mentioned, one entitled "Wings Up" tells of the very interesting training of officers in the Air Forces. Clark Gable narrates an amusing commentary.

LEONARD LYONS

Loose-Leaf Notebook

New York, May 27.

Some months ago Tom Driberg, who writes a column for the London Express under the name of "William Hickey," was elected to Parliament. He quickly discovered that the food served in the dining room of the House of Commons is not the choicest in all Britain. After a luncheon which had displeased him, Driberg asked for the Complaint Book and wrote: "The Scotch Broth and the Pilaff a la Turque are insults to Scotland and Turkey, respectively." The following day he received a reply from the Kitchen Committee: "In the future, broth and pilaff will not be described on the menu as Scotch and Turkish, respectively."

ROBERT E. SHERWOOD

Giles Romilly, nephew of Winston Churchill, was captured by the Nazis in Narvik. He now is in a prison camp in Germany. His aunt, Mrs. Churchill, received a letter from him recently. It expressed appreciation for her having sent him a book—"The Family." He reported that the book had been confiscated by his captors in September, 1941. Then, in July, 1942, the Nazis finally delivered the book to him—with one page cut out by the censors. Romilly now awaits the end of the war so he can be free, see his family again, and also find out what was on that page.

Bob Sherwood refused to approve Elmer Davis' transfer of J. Q. Riznick from the Washington office of OWI to the New York office. This was a test case which established Sherwood as the autonomous director in New York. Riznick has resigned . . . While Jimmy Young, the former Tokyo correspondent, worked at R.K.O. as a technical adviser on "Behind the Rising Sun," his wife tired of remaining idle and disappeared for three days. She returned and revealed that she had spent the three days working in a Culver City movie. "Your Son Is Our Brother" . . . The new Army picture about the campaign in Tunisia was made under the supervision of Col. Frank Capra.

The mobilization of the music-publishers for the war program finally became an actuality the other night—when Bill Lewis of the OWI, Oscar Hammerstein, II, representing the songwriters, and a group of publishers held a conference. The mobilization plan was conceived by a group of youngsters who also attended—the stenographers and secretaries employed by the publishers . . . Donald M. Nelson's weight-reducing course resulted in his losing 45 pounds to date.

Dorothy Sands, the impressionist who now is appearing in "Tomorrow the World," appeared in the experimental plays written by the late Thomas Wolfe while he was a student at Professor Baker's famed "47 Workshop." These plays were produced at Radcliffe College . . . Miss Sands met Wolfe, who was to become one of the wordiest writers in American literature, and complained to him about the length of some of the "sides" . . . "I guess maybe the theater is too confining for me," sighed Wolfe. "The trouble with the theater is that you have to say yes or no in not more than 25 or 30 sentences."

Last Sunday Jo Davidson, the sculptor, attended the unveiling of his bust of Andrew Furuseth, the late president of the International Seamen's Union. Furuseth had founded the union, and his union salary never was higher than that of a seaman. For years he toured the seaports, campaigning for the right of a seaman to leave a ship at the end of a voyage, instead of becoming liable to criminal prosecution for desertion . . . Furuseth once was warned that detectives were on their way to arrest him. "Let them come," he said, "They can't put me in a room smaller than the room I always have, they can't give me food simpler than the food I always eat, and they can't make me lonelier than I always have been. Let them come."

HEDDA HOPPER

Mr. Lunt to Fiddle During Fire!

Hollywood, Calif., May 27 — You've got to hand it to Arthur Hornblow—he gets what he goes after. Whom do you think he's got for Nero in "Quo Vadis"? That superb actor, Alfred Lunt. He's also set Lynn Fontanne—but that's a secret. . . . Lela Rogers, Charlie Koerner's assistant, is searching for an older actress — you know, a la Spring Byington, Fay Bainter, or a gal like them, to put under contract. First picture they'll do when they find the lady is "Heil, Muggins" — about an English charwoman who scrubs her way to fame with a sock finish that will have you screaming. . . . Whether you like it or not, you'll be listening to Pat Dane warble when she warms up with Tommy Dorsey's band. . . . Linda Darnell won't play the ingenue in "Buffalo Bill," but a little Indian girl.

LYNN FONTANNE

Why Do They Do It?

The day she found out she was going to have a baby, Veronica Lake swore to me she was going to play the Javanese girl for Cecil de Mille in "Dr. Wassell." She's not so naive that she imagines that would engender good will, is she? . . . Judy Garland phoned Van Johnson to ask whether he'd like to come up to her house and listen to some new records. He would, he came, and walked into a surprise party of all his friends. . . . As Lionel Barrymore walked into his home after leaving the hospital Saturday, the radio was on full blast and he heard coming from it, "Lionel Barrymore has suffered a serious collapse."

Social Problem

"What's keeping Steve Crane, Lana Turner's husband, so long at the Fort MacArthur induction center? Could it be he's staying around until after the birth of the baby so they'll know where to find him if or when the divorce begins. . . . Olivia de Havilland and her Capt. John Huston were at Romanoff's Saturday. . . . Carmen Miranda, to be accompanied by her band, plans a six-week tour of Army camps late in the summer. . . . E. H. Griffith and David Hempstead entertained six American airmen Saturday with a luncheon at Lucey's and showed them "The Sky's the Limit," featuring Fred Astaire.

Ann Sothern, on her way to Ventura to be wed, forgot the license, stopped midway there, phoned back to Beverly to have it picked up, and rushed on so the ceremony wouldn't be late. She's sure she's married this time, 'cause she had three rings—two gold bands and a diamond one in the middle to match the rest of her jewelry. . . . The Ray Millands' reception for bridal party was charming. House was decorated in white peonies. Refreshments consisted of champagne, brandy, and such food as you dream of. There were no photographers and only intimate friends, such as Barbara Stanwyck, the Fred MacMurrays, the Walter Langs, the Zeppo Marxes, and members of the family.

It's NCHA Now

We cannot help wondering why it took nine years to change the name of the Alley Dwelling Authority. The name was never appropriate. To be sure, the work of the authority was concentrated in blocks containing hidden alley slums during its early years. But even then its job was to get rid of alley dwellings, not to create them. Because of the association of ideas with the name, its attachment to an agency building modern low-rental housing to take people out of the alleys was a real handicap. People being rescued from the slums were naturally eager to get away from the connotations that the words "alley dwelling" carry. When the authority attempted to buy vacant land in some neighborhoods, home owners resented the supposed implication that they had an alley problem. Finally, a financial syndicate purchasing housing authority bonds discriminated against the old ADA because of its name.

Presumably the old name was retained only because the ADA had been a real pioneer in the field of public housing and had gained an enviable reputation in spite of its cognomen. But even that argument lost weight when the authority had to suspend alley reclamation and concentrate its efforts on war housing. The new name, "National Capital Housing Authority," is not only appropriate to its present work. It is also suggestive of the great housing task that must be undertaken here in the future. Not only the inhabited alleys but also large areas of slums where no alley exists must be rebuilt. So it is doubly gratifying that the National Capital Housing Authority now has a name which emphasizes its habit of looking forward, not backward.

Bow To Ruml

The tax bill that has finally emerged from conference is a compromise measure that sacrifices principle to political expediency. As such it is rather bitter medicine both for those who favor full cancellation of 1942 taxes and those who have opposed any cancellation as wrong in principle. Since the possibility of a Presidential veto had to be kept constantly in mind, the conferees were virtually forced to abandon the straight pay-as-you-go plan in favor of some system of partial abatement. In view of the handicaps under which they labored, the result is probably as good as could be expected. The conference bill, if enacted, will at least put all taxpayers on a current basis within a reasonably short time without discriminating unduly against upper bracket incomes.

The feature of the bill that compensates for its general inadequacies is the provision for collection at source of a 20-per-cent withholding tax on wages and salaries. Given prompt action, the bill should be passed in plenty of time for these collections to begin July 1. It is also high time to begin thinking about how to raise more revenue from new taxes. For the limited returns from the additional taxes imposed under the conference bill would provide only a very small part of the 16 billion dollars in taxes that Secretary Morgenthau has indicated to be necessary to fight inflation.

Curb On Kerr

The prestige of Congress was enhanced by the action of the Senate Appropriations Committee on Wednesday in striking down the House-enacted rider barring salary payments to three Federal employes. We hope that the Senate as a whole will uphold this decision and insist upon it when the deficiency appropriation bill goes to conference with the House.

It will be no remedy for Congress to review again the evidence assembled by the House Kerr Committee against the three proscribed individuals or to go into another protracted investigation of their pasts. The Congress cannot properly take action against them in any way save through formal impeachment proceedings. The attempt to remove them from office without judicial trial, as The Post has previously pointed out, violates the constitutional prohibition against bills of attainder and usurps the authority of the executive branch of the Government. This contention is now supported by an opinion of the Attorney General who, on Wednesday, flatly called the House rider unconstitutional.

That it is also unwise and absurd was made clear by the testimony of Secretary Ickes before a Senate subcommittee respecting Robert Morss Lovett. The House action was patently a product of resentment and irritation, supported only out of a sense of fraternal loyalty to Congressmen Dies and Kerr. The Senate, happily, is now in a position to save the House from the consequences of its intemperance and impatience. It can do so by throwing this rider into the discard where it belongs. Congress can best retain popular respect not by seeking to rule the executive branch but by confining its activities strictly to its own jurisdiction.

Illegal Strikes

President Roosevelt minced no words in threatening to break the rubber workers' strike if the men were not back at their jobs by noon yesterday His description of this organized defiance of the War Labor Board included such phrases as "inexcusable," "shocking to the Nation," "a challenge to government by law," "a blow against the effective prosecution of the war" and "a strike against the security of this Nation." In using this strong language Mr. Roosevelt unquestionably reflected the views of a great majority of the people. No doubt the strikers realized how vulnerable their position was, for most of them went back to work before or shortly after the deadline fixed by the President.

There is not much about the incident, however, that is reassuring. Before the strikers returned, their union president obtained assurance that the WLB would entertain a petition for reconsideration of its decision which precipitated the walkout. Of course, the petition is to be entertained only after production is resumed, but that does not remove the implication of governmental weakness in the face of internal threats "to the security of this Nation." The simple fact is that the Government is not well prepared to deal with such challenges to public authority, and at the moment nothing much is being done about it.

Why Congress is withholding the Connally bill in these circumstances is a mystery that ought to be explained. The Gallup Poll published on the page opposite today shows that 67 per cent of the cross-section of union members questioned about the Connally bill approve it. Indorsement of the bill by the public in general is still more emphatic. Yet Congress is permitting enactment of that measure to be delayed if not frustrated because a House committee has tied it up with the more drastic Smith bill.

The loose argument which is most frequently directed against the Connally bill is that it would encroach upon the traditional right of labor to strike. Most unions have voluntarily laid aside the right to strike during wartime, it is said, and their good faith should not be undercut by abolishing that right or even abridging it by law. Actually, however, the Connally bill would have no such effect. It would authorize no attempt to prevent the individual worker from walking out if he chose to do so. It would penalize only those who conspire to strike, who aid and promote walkouts in war plants after the Government has taken over such plants as a means of continuing production essential to the war effort.

Obviously this safeguard would not touch the traditional right to strike against a private employer. It would merely arm the President with more effective means than he has at present of dealing with strikes against the Government. Now strikes against the Government have never been legal, and they never can be legalized if we are going to have a government of laws and not a system of anarchy controlled by whatever group can apply the most pressure at the moment. The President has emphatically pointed out that no group has the right to strike against the United States. In wartime that point is so clear that it needs no argument. Indeed, a strike against a government engaged in total war is closely akin to sabotage. Congress is under a heavy obligation to strengthen the hand of the President in dealing with walkouts of this kind which, as the President points out, imperil the security of the Nation.

Upper Yangtze

Winston Churchill has twice made it clear this week that even while Germany remains the enemy against whom the preponderant power of the Allies will continue to be directed, the Allies do not plan to neglect Japan. On the contrary, the war against Hitler's Far Eastern partner is going to be intensified. And what has happened in the Solomons and New Guinea and what is happening in the Aleutians is a reminder to the Japanese that this is no idle boast.

It may very well be, therefore, that because they find themselves weaker along the periphery, the Japanese are making a new attack at the center—against China. After six years of warfare and disruption, China is weak and the events of the past year and a half have left China more isolated than ever. We cannot assume, therefore, that the present Japanese offensive in the upper Yangtze Valley will follow a familiar pattern and run aground. To be sure, Japan's lines are already stretched long and by the present operation will be stretched longer. And Chungking is still well out of reach, being separated from the newly conquered Japanese territory south of Ichang by several hundred miles of difficult terrain.

The chief threat of the Japanese drive, however, is not to Chungking but to the rice-producing regions around Changsha. The loss of these, or alternatively, the destruction of the crops by the Japanese marauders, would intensify the economic malaise from which China is progressively suffering. It is all the more imperative, therefore, that whatever aid can be rendered China at this time should be given. This does not mean that a basic change in Allied strategy is called for. That would be a grievous error. But it does mean that everything that can be done should be done to harry and harass the enemy so that his efforts to deal a knockout blow to the nation which, longer than all others, has been fighting totalitarian aggression will fail.

Italy's Dams

It is now clear that the successful bombing of the Moehne and Eder Dams by the R. A. F. dealt a devastating blow to the economy of an important industrial area in the Third Reich and struck terror in the hearts of the inhabitants of that region. But the Germans are not the only ones who are worried by the event. Given the proximity of Italy to Allied air bases in North Africa, her relative lack of defenses against air attack and her enormous dependence on hydro-electric power, it is obvious that the successful application in Italy of the technique employed by the R. A. F. in the Rhineland would enormously impair Italy's capacity to wage war and might paralyze her altogether. It is against this prospect that the Italians may appraise Mr. Churchill's warning to them to discard their leaders and throw themselves on Allied mercy. Already they have witnessed the disbandment of the Comintern, the existence of which was the ostensible reason for the alliance of the Axis powers. Now they are given another justification for severing their ties with Germany, and a much more realistic justification.

For Italy is more than ever dependent on her hydro-electric system for power. The cutting off of sea transport between Germany and Italy and Germany's increasing rail transportation difficulties has reduced the flow of coal from the Reich to Italy to a trickle. That system is thus for her the bottleneck of bottlenecks. Without that power her trains could not run, her industries could not operate and even her agricultural activities would be very hard hit. It would not be necessary for the Allies to destroy all of the more than 3000 dams which hold back and regulate the flow of water in Italy's fast-flowing rivers in order to deal Italy a mortal blow. A few key targets if attacked with the force and precision that marked the R. A. F.'s raids on the Moehne and Eder Dams would be enough to create an industrial and economic paralysis in the kingdom.

To be sure, the Italian government can be expected, with what happened in the Rhineland in mind, to bolster up the defenses of the dams as rapidly as possible. But, in view of the number of these dams and the relative vulnerability of some of the most important among them, this task may prove beyond the capacity of the Fascists successfully to carry out. Much time would be needed for elaborate defense measures, and we can be sure that the Allies will give Mussolini no more time than they can help. More than ever the possibility now exists that the country that gave birth to Douhet may be the first country to be knocked out by air warfare alone.

Host To A President

The knowledge of the world which this war has provoked among Americans is not the least of its side products. One of the countries we have become aware of is little Liberia, whose retiring President, Edwin Barclay, together with the President-elect, William V. S. Tubman, have arrived in Washington as the guests of our Government. Liberia is the Negro republic in west Africa. It went its way in obscurity till war broke out, and then we realized Liberia's importance to our Atlantic security, situated as it is at the "Atlantic Narrows," where the outthrust African continent faces the bulge of Brazil. From then on Liberia under President Barclay has been most helpful in putting itself at the service of the United States.

This aid was a natural consequence of the patron-protege relations which always have subsisted between the United States and Liberia. That country was first colonized by American freed slaves nearly a century and a quarter ago. In 1847 it set up an independent government modeled upon our American institutions. Its capital, Monrovia, was named for our fifth President, and its economy owes a great deal to our role as the leading buyer of Liberia's tropical products. Consequently, when we entered the war, one of our early acts was to come to an agreement with the Barclay government on mutual war aid. The west African republic undertook to give us all the facilities we required on Liberian soil, and they have been many, for Liberia is an important stop on commercial and military ferry airways between the United States, west Africa and beyond. There are now in Liberia American troops, airports and other aids in the protection of our security and Liberia's. We hope the Liberian party will enjoy their stay in this country.

MAY CAROLS

See from fields the children bringing Blossoms all the day,
Wreathing round a shrine while singing
Carols for the May.
Every wildflower there reposes.
Violets and sweet
Bells and ragged wayside roses
Lay they at her feet.

Sprigs of song like buds they tender,
Fresh as purity,
Shrilly sweet as winds that render
Untaught melody.
Fresh as ever cuckoo trilled . . . wren,
Linnet, mead-lark gay . . .
Voices from the fields where children
Hymn the Queen of May.

Trade Agreements

By Mark Sullivan

Wallace Replies

VICE PRESIDENT Henry A. Wallace thinks that by implication I have misrepresented his attitude about international trade. He has written me a letter which I here print, with immaterial omissions dictated by space:

"Dear Mark: I have long admired your desire as a journalist to be fair, and this esteem has continued, no matter how much I at times disagreed with what you wrote, and no matter how often I felt that you misrepresented my position. Such misrepresentation, I believed, was based on lack of understanding or inadequate consideration of the facts, rather than on deliberate intent. Doubtless the same spirit of intended fairness animated you when you wrote the column published May 19. But in this particular column I feel that you have paid somewhat less attention than usual to the facts.

"YOU IMPLY that I wish to substitute some 'strange new notions about international trade and an international world' for the trade agreement program administered by Secretary Hull. In making this insinuation, you have completely ignored my position . . . stated on hundreds of occasions over the last twenty years. I opposed enactment of the Fordney-McCumber Tariff Act of 1922. . . . I opposed the Smoot-Hawley Tariff Act of 1930. In 1932 I repeatedly made speeches on behalf of a gradual lowering of the tariff. . . . Soon after, I found myself in the Cabinet and discovered that Secretary Hull and I were in complete accord on this particular approach. . . . Later on we made common cause both in the Cabinet and before the committees of Congress on behalf of the reciprocal trade agreements approach. In 1933 and 1934 I made speeches and wrote articles urging the reciprocal approach to the tariff question. . . .

"Following passage of the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act in 1934 I gave my full support to the trade agreement program. In spite of the hostile attitude of some farm groups toward the trade agreements negotiated by Secretary Hull, I defended these agreements in speeches before farm audiences. Subsequently some of the most influential farm groups did support the trade agreement program. Without this support the act could not have been renewed.

"In 1937 I . . . urge[d] renewal of the act. In 1940 I urged that the act be renewed for a second time. Now that the act has come up for renewal a third time, I have again spoken out in support of continuance of the trade agreement program . . . On Dec. 31, 1942, I said: 'It will be enormously reassuring to all those who are interested in an enduring peace, based on economic justice, if the trade agreement program can be renewed by decisive vote' . . .

"You are perhaps not aware that the Board of Economic Warfare, of which I am chairman . . . has consistently acted to keep private exporting and importing firms in the international trade picture. On Aug. 29, 1942, I said: As far as possible, in all the operations of the board, the regular export and import channels are used primarily because that is the most efficient way of getting our work done. We also want to safeguard the businessman's place in foreign trade and soften the impact of the war upon him. We want to preserve as much as we can of freedom for the individual. We know our country and the world will need those businessmen in the post-war world. In our war against totalitarianism, we do not want to end up by going totalitarian ourselves' . . .

"YOU IGNORE the fact that repeatedly over the last ten years I have expressed my adherence to the principles of capitalistic democracy as contrasted with all forms of totalitarianism . . . On May 16 I said: 'The only alternative to communism which has any prospect of survival in the modern world is capitalistic democracy. Most of us in the United States believe that capitalistic democracy, if it is to stand up against communism, must be strengthened so as to make sure of continuous full employment. Any modifications in our system ought to furnish incentive for both private initiative and government to follow those policies which maintain the maximum of employment.'

"While I am as firm as ever in my support of the trade agreement program as a corner stone in our postwar international trade policy, I do not regard it as the last word in the encouragement of healthy international commerce. . . . The measures I envision would bring more business to private firms, rather than less.

"This is a critical time . . . and all of us, including journalists, must be willing to face facts squarely. . . . And it seems to me that part of the responsibility of journalists is to represent the positions taken by public officials fairly and accurately, and without imputing to them thoughts, theories, plans, dreams or 'astrological visions' which they do not possess and never have possessed.

"Sincerely yours,
"H. A. WALLACE."

Aleutian Job

By Paul Schubert

Pacific Preview

IT IS just about a year since the Japanese invaded the outer Aleutians. A year ago our Pacific enemy was still expanding, still intoxicated by the fact that valuable territories of the great powers lay lightly defended, easy prey for the Japanese organization of conquest. Japanese vanity expanded faster than the Japanese armies—what a thrill it was to reveal America, Britain, Holland, all the western nations for the weaklings they were! The sight of an ineffectual America was balm to the Japanese spirit.

It is interesting to review the entire sequence of events in the Aleutians, because those events reflect, in miniature, the development of the Pacific warfare.

In the first place, the expansive thrust that took Japan to the Aleutians was not intended to stop there. The real objective was Alaska. The Aleutians form a string of stepping stones between Asia and Alaska — and of those stepping-stones the Japanese coveted in particular our base at Dutch Harbor, covering as it does the sea route to western Alaska. The expedition sent out by Japan at about this time last year was an ambitious drive. The Japanese expected it to go far.

LIKE ALL Japan's expansive moves, there in the Pacific, this one did not go as far as was expected. This one, in fact, was stopped short by the unexpected strength of our air power in the Dutch Harbor area, and by Japan's unexpected and decisive setback in the Battle of Midway which was simultaneously being fought out further to the south.

Tenacious as they are, the Japanese accepted a secondary objective. They landed at Attu and Kiska. These landings represented the frustration of the original plan. They also represented the fact that Japan did get something out of the original plan—territory which had been under the United States flag—and the further fact that Japan intended one day to return to the drive toward Alaska.

For at that time the Japanese were still convinced that we were a pushover.

When Japan landed in the outer Aleutians, voices were raised in this country demanding that they be thrown out again.

Apart from national pride, there are reasons why the invaders should be thrown out. The stepping-stone value of the Aleutians as a link between Alaska and Siberia is one. The value of the Aleutians as a military stepping-stone for operations against Japan is another. The importance of the outer Aleutians as a weather observation point is still another.

But the Japanese weren't to be pushed out of Attu and Kiska by wishing—nor by loading a few troops into ships and rushing to action with the bayonet. It has taken a whole year of hard and systematic work to build up our north Pacific strength to the necessary effectiveness.

Pacific warfare is three-dimensional amphibian warfare. It is island warfare. Sea power is always involved. Air power is always involved. And in most instances hard and violent ground fighting is involved.

IN THE Pacific war's early actions, Japan invariably had superiority in all three branches of the struggle. Bit by bit, at Guadalcanal, in Papua, and now at Attu, we see the situation reversed.

Sea control of the waters around Attu made our invasion possible—it enabled us to land our expeditionary force, to support it with naval guns, to supply it after it had landed. This sea control was won in action—in last year's Pacific naval battles, and in sea fighting right there in Aleutian waters.

To establish air superiority, we worked for a full year to extend our Aleutian airdromes. Last August we moved into the Andreanovs. In January we moved further west to Amchitka. Not until we were able to operate more aircraft over the outer Aleutians than the enemy, were we ready to make our bid for mastery.

To establish ground superiority, we had to train specialist troops for the job of amphibian warfare against the Japanese enemy.

In spite of great obstacles of climate and distance, we have done all these things successfully.

That we have not done them more swiftly, is merely evidence that the Pacific war won't be won in a day.

But it can be won, by using the right methods—by attaining operational superiority on land and sea and in the air, and by applying strategic leverage to upset the overgrown Japanese empire of conquest.

War Bond Ball Game

The War Bond ball game between the Norfolk Naval Base and the Washington baseball teams originated by The Washington Post was a grand success. I hope you are as pleased as we are with the final tabulation, the sale of $2,125,375 of War Bonds as a result of this game.

We want to express our appreciation of the invaluable assistance that you and the members of your Post staff gave us, particularly Mr. Shirley Povich who conceived the idea and was of immense help to us in carrying it through to a successful conclusion. Aside from the financial success of the evening, it helped further to develop the broad good will that exists between the investors and the volunteers who make the sale of bonds possible.

Again with thanks for the fine part that The Washington Post played in this successful bond rally, the first of its type, I am

Lifts For Workers

In spite of the acute shortage of gasoline which caused inconvenience and delay to thousands of war workers this morning, I observed that as many as 50 per cent of the cars going downtown were occupied by only one or, at the most, two persons. In all probability the gasoline crisis will continue or recur until the end of the war. Something should be done to encourage car drivers to pick up people waiting for buses and streetcars and thereby relieve the transportation situation.

Couldn't The Post and the other Washington newspapers print in large headline type the names of prominent residential areas and names of prominent downtown working areas in such a manner that any motorist could cut out the names of the areas to which he is going each morning and night and post this notice in his windshield? A number of motorists stop regularly at bus stops to pick up passengers. If a placard were mounted on the windshield indicating his destination the motorist would feel more free to pick up passengers and the potential riders would feel more free to ask for a lift. Perhaps the bus riders would paste their labels on cardboard and use this as a device for asking for a lift.

WILLIAM J. C. WHEATON.

Emblem For Service

A number of the officers and men of the United States Army, Navy, and Marine Corps have returned to this country from combatant service abroad, and been invalided out of the service. In a goodly number of these cases, of course, battle wounds were quite apparent—the loss of an arm, a leg, an eye. However, in a very large number of instances the injuries sustained on active duty are in no way apparent. There are Navy and Marine enlisted men and officers suffering from shocks, "war neurosis," psychoneurosis, etc. A large number of these men will be honorably discharged as unfit for active duty, and will return to civilian life.

Would it not be appropriate for Congress, or the responsible authorities in the Army, Navy and Marine Corps to establish some simple emblem—perhaps a rosette or ribbon such as is or was used by the Legion d'Honneur—which these men could wear as outward token of their service? First, I am sure that we, as a group, are proud of having served and are proud of the service in which we served. In the second place—and surely this is disgraceful!—we recently read in the newspapers reports of two young men, both of whom had seen combatant service and been honorably discharged from the service because of injuries, who were set upon and beaten by a group of soldiers who themselves probably never had smelled powder!

I should like to make one point, however. If such an insignia is authorized I believe it should be restricted to men who really have been on combatant duty, not those released after six or seven months in an Army camp, where they went because they were drafted and through no volition of their own. If they deserve recognition, give it to them. But separate that designation from that authorized for those of us who, as in my case, were over age and safe from the draft, but showed our patriotism through voluntary enlistment and through seeking combatant duty.

Washington Traffic

With the Capital Transit Co. buses using 25,000 gallons of gas a day, does anyone know how much gas could be saved if:

1. Numerous needless stops were eliminated.
2. Numerous needless "Stop" signs were removed.
3. Traffic signals were shortened from 40 to 45 second intervals, as they are now, to 20 or 25 second intervals.

What are the facts; and why is Washington still on far too much of a prewar traffic basis?

GERALD W. WESTON.
Washington, May 24.

Taxation At Source

Let's have 20 per cent (at least) source collection from wages and salaries, no cancellations for anyone, no quarterly returns—and a 40 per cent at source rate when "double collection" is over. For a family of four, this means only about 20 per cent of $4000 incomes, 15 per cent of $3000, and 2 per cent of $2000—moderate levies indeed for total war.

Double collection is altogether attractive by comparison with any other scheme for raising the same (but still inadequate) added revenue. Neither sales tax nor spending tax has comparable revenue possibilities: both involve awful administrative (and drafting) problems.

Mass income taxation is eminently fair; it can yield abundantly; it minimizes administrative problems. Congress willing, it could be started almost immediately.

The Once Over

That Summer Vacation

The summer vacation this year, if any, will be a problem. The shorter the distance the better, Washington announces, even by train. To get anywhere by automobile you will have to be the discoverer of a new fuel. So what it amounts to is the Rationed Vacation.

* * * *

There's a ceiling on beach romances, mountain fun, marshmallow roasts, moonlight canoeing and hotel porch gossip. With everything frozen except red ants.

* * * *

But there will be no kicking. War is war, and the public will realize that it is lucky not to have to get a book of coupons and select its summer outings by the point system.

* * * *

Up to the time when you have to study a point chart to see how deep a sunburn you are entitled to, or consult your ration board to determine whether it will take red or blue coupons to take a swim, all will be well.

* * * *

No matter how limited your vacation may be in 1943, just bear in mind that you don't have to register for it.

* * * *

And remember, too, that while you are spending your two weeks in a hammock in your own backyard no neighbor is getting four weeks at a swank resort through the black market.

* * * *

Mr. Eastman, the transportation boss, urges the public to do as little vacationing as possible, and especially to avoid starting or returning on weekends, when the railroad burden is terrific without the added load.

* * * *

He will have to do a little extra harping on this point. The American public has become so accustomed to leaving on Saturday that it has become a habit. Mr. Eastman should get a few good slogans at once. Something like:

"Do your patriotic part with a Thursday start!"

* * * *

Or possibly some couplets:
Make your outing help the war—
Start on Friday or before!

* * * *

Give the war a nice big boosty:
Start your summer trip on "Tuesty."

He who goes away on Monday
Is the railroads' friend on Sunday.

* * * *

Saturday's a menace day:
Take your trip on "Wennesday."

* * * *

Good luck, Mr. Eastman, to your plans. But you'd better say a word to the boss.

* * * *

Zigzag, Zigzag Down the Field

Yale University is inaugurating a School of Alcoholic Studies. It opens this summer for research into the effects of alcohol on man. Any suggestion that the school begin its explorations by going on a binge will probably be rejected. That Yale has gone all these years in the dark on the subject will come as a surprise

* * * *

But as a former New Havener, this correspondent can testify that there have been amazing changes in the general alcoholic situation in that community, perhaps justifying some elaborate studies. It is not the place for alcoholic studies that it used to be.

* * * *

Elmer Twitchell has a great idea for settling one of the most disturbing situations in American life. He would lock Capt. Joe Foss, flying hero of the Solomons, in the same room with John Lewis for about two minutes.

* * * *

It is now pretty obvious that the pompous postures of Mussolini for the last 20 years were merely public exhibitions of what might be called a hope "chest."

* * * *

"Senate Cries Beat Japan First"—headline. In other words the gas warfare is on.

* * * *

"Nazis, surrendering by the thousands, asked the way to prison"—News item. And they got pretty exasperated if they got any wrong directions.

War Taxation

By Ernest Lindley

Congress Lacks Real Courage

THE compromise on pay-as-you-go struck in the conference committee is probably as good as could be expected. It is a substantial victory for the idea set in motion almost a year ago by Beardsley Ruml. Others before Mr. Ruml had advocated putting the personal income tax on a pay-as-you-go basis and collecting at least part of it at the source. The great obstacle was double taxation: the payment of two years' taxes in one, which at the rates already in effect was an impossibility for many taxpayers.

LINDLEY

Mr. Ruml proposed to clear this obstacle by the simple device of "skipping" or "forgiving" or "cancelling" one year's tax. These words were unfortunate, because they gave the impression that the purpose, or result, would be a windfall to taxpayers. This was the basis of the opposition organized and led by the Treasury—an opposition which must be considered primarily political. Actually, the Ruml plan brought no benefit to any personal income tax payer until he died or his income was sharply reduced. Much of the benefit from having paid one year's less tax at death would have been taken away by estate taxes. A suitable revision of the estate taxes would have met this objection entirely. (The Canadians, in adopting the substance of the Ruml plan, merely added to the estate tax the tax due for one year on investment income exceeding $5000).

THE IRONY of the Ruml plan is that the President and the Treasury should have opposed it, while the Republican Party belatedly embraced it. Mr. Ruml is decidedly a liberal economist, who has been intimately connected with the New Deal from 1932 on, and is still an adviser of the National Resources Planning Board, in addition to being treasurer of R. H. Macy and Co., and chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

Mr. Ruml's plan was fiscally sound and politically popular—a rare combination. It assured more money to the Treasury. The failure of the Treasury to adopt it immediately as its own remains inexplicable, and gave the Republican Party a windfall. The Republicans did not see what had been handed to them, immediately. They sprang to life only after Mr. Ruml and a few columnists and radio commentators had explained and advocated the plan for several months.

Despite all the arguments it could muster, the Treasury had to admit, at least by implication, that Ruml was fundamentally right. It is impracticable, if not impossible, to put the income tax on a pay-as-you go basis without abating at least a portion of one year's tax. The Treasury assented to compromises recognizing this irrefutable fact. The argument centered on the extent of the abatement and whether it would apply to all alike.

The conference committee's agreement discriminates in favor of the very small income taxpayer, by forgiving the tax for one year when it is $50 or less. Other taxpayers will be forgiven 75 per cent of the tax for 1942 or 1943, whichever was the smaller, and the remaining 25 per cent will be paid in two annual installments. A second "windfall" provision is contained to tap incomes which were more than $30,000 larger in 1943 or 1942 than before the war.

This compromise might be called "75 per cent Ruml," or 100 per cent Ruml plus a 12½ per cent increase in the rate during the next two years for all persons owing more than $50. This increase will provide, however, only a small part of the additional revenue which should be raised by taxation during the war.

ABOUT 18 months have now elapsed since Pearl Harbor, and about five since the Seventy-eighth Congress convened. Good fiscal management would have prescribed a withholding tax in January, 1942. It took most of that year to get any kind of tax bill, and that which was passed was very far from meeting the requirements either for revenue or for helping to control inflation. Now five months more have been consumed on a very simple matter: pay-as-you-go with collection at the source. A beginning has not even been made on the far harder job of devising means to obtain some 12 to 14 billion dollars from new taxes.

There are still a few loopholes in the personal income tax—notably the freedom of tax-exempt securities from special war taxation. But most of the new taxes, if they are raised, will have to come out of small incomes. They are the only source of sufficient revenue, and the principal source of inflationary pressure. Politically, this is the hardest taxation to apply. Neither the Democrats nor the Republicans have shown any real courage in dealing with war taxation. Judging by the length of time necessary to obtain such a simple and popular reform as pay-as-you-go, the prospects of adequate new taxation are shadowy.

The Gallup Poll

By George Gallup
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., May 27.—The Connally-Smith antistrike bill, now in the House of Representatives, closely reflects the sentiments of a great majority of Americans in its attempts to control strikes and regulate labor unions.

One of the main provisions of the bill, the passage of which is being postponed pending the outcome of the soft coal dispute, would make it a crime for anyone to forment strikes in companies taken over by the Federal Government.

The public has for many months held the view that labor's right to strike, however much merit it may have in time of peace, should be suspended in time of war. The arguments of union leaders against prohibiting strikes by law have thus far made little impression upon public opinion.

The public's reaction to the antistrike provision of the Connally-Smith bill was measured in a coast-to-coast survey by the Institute on the following issue:

"Would you approve or disapprove of making it a crime for anyone to urge workers to strike in companies taken over by the Government?"

The vote is:

Approve	78%
Disapprove	14
Undecided	8

It is interesting to note even among labor union members included in the Institute's sampling of national opinion, there is substantial sentiment in favor of the outlawing of strikes in Government-held plants as provided by the Connally-Smith measure.

The vote of union members interviewed in the survey is:

Approve	67%
Disapprove	22
Undecided	11

While the bill in Congress is limited to companies taken over by the Government, as for instance the soft coal mines now under the jurisdiction of Solid Fuels Administrator Ickes, the majority of Americans would like to see antistrike laws apply to all war industries.

That has been shown in many surveys dating back even to the period before Pearl Harbor. The most recent found that 81 per cent of voters believe strikes should be forbidden by law in war industries for the duration, while 13 per cent think labor should continue to have the right to strike, and 6 per cent are undecided.

Swedes Still Think They Can Avoid War

Despite the German attack on the Swedish submarine Draken, and other incidents which have increased tension in Sweden, a majority of the Swedish people think their country will remain out of the war to the end.

The number holding this opinion has not been changed by the events of the past six months.

Last October and again recently the Svenska Gallup Institute (Gallup Poll of Sweden) put the following question to a cross-section of the people in that uneasy neutral nation, hemmed in by Nazi-occupied lands:

"Do you think Sweden will remain out of the war, or will be brought into the war?"

	Oct. 1942	Today
Remain out	58%	58%
Will enter war	11	12
Unwilling to guess	31	30

Nazis Reported Digging In, Drives Abandoned

By the Associated Press

Stockholm, May 27.—Axis and neutral reports from Germany agreed today that Adolf Hitler probably would keep his armies on the defensive this summer in the hope that time and the U-boats would win the war for him.

Germans agreed, these reports said, that for the first time in three summers no Nazi offensive would be launched in the east.

Visitors returning from Germany said Germans hoped they could use the season to train new troops and replace equipment battered or lost in the disasters of the Donets Basin, Stalingrad and Tunisia.

While the Germans may be deliberately attempting to mislead, they nevertheless have been flooding neutral listening posts with pictures of the "impregnable" Atlantic wall and Mediterranean defenses.

There were reports the Germans were building a triple defensive line in the east running from Estonia through southern Russia to the Black Sea. It was said to be 60 to 70 miles in depth.

German troop transports were said to have completed the transfer of troops from the Caucasus to the Balkans where they are believed to be posted not only in Serbia but also in Greece and along the Turkish-Bulgarian border.

The Germans also were reported to have promised to equip five new Rumanian divisions for home defense and another seven to guard eastern stations.

Berlin dispatches, discussing any Balkan invasion, quoted Nazi military circles as saying American and British forces would encounter difficult fighting conditions in the rough terrain. No word came from Germany regarding the mounting invasion threat to Italy, but from other sources Swedish newspapers printed stories saying the invasion of Sicily was near.

Workers Transported

Some circles in Berlin were credited with the opinion that the Russians would not begin an offensive in the east on the grounds that they were not sure the British and Americans would support them with a simultaneous move from the west. A German offensive, on the other hand, might force a move in the west in support of Stalin, they were reported as saying.

At the same time millions of additional workers were transported to Germany from the occupied countries, German newspapers said, to work in the war factories where a drive is on for more munitions. One German-controlled newspaper said that of the 366,050,000 persons in German occupied or influenced countries, 168,276,000 are working for the Axis.

Yank Fliers Show Thunderbolt To Royal Pair at U. S. Air Base

United States Bomber Base Somewhere in England (Friday), May 27.—King George and Queen Elizabeth informally discussed the problems American Flying Fortresses face in blasting Axis cities in daylight raids in talks with American flying officers at this bomber base and met America's new sky terror, the Thunderbolt fighter, in their first visit to a United States fighter station.

The royal couple heard the story of raids on Wilhelmshaven, Paris and Emden and studied photographs showing the results. Col. Stanley Wray of Birmingham, Ala., who led the first three raids of his group, told the King:

Evidence of Victories

"The first time over Wilhelmshaven we took them by surprise, I think, because we didn't run into much trouble, but from then on it has been much tougher," Wray said.

Queen Elizabeth ventured that "of course, later on, you will have more weight and be able to split up your forces, won't you?" And Wray said "yes, that's true."

Earlier at a fighter base the King had examined the first P-47 Thunderbolt to shoot down a Nazi plane. It was piloted by Maj. James J. Stone of Plainfield, N. J., and bore a Swastika painted on its side, mute witness of the victory.

The King examined its guns closely. Twenty-eight-year-old Col. Arman Peterson of Flagstaff, Ariz., commanding officer of the base, explained their operation.

Crewman at Attention

The young crewmen stood at attention beneath the wings of their planes. The American pilots were spick and span in their uniforms, but the crewmen wore their oily dungarees.

Asked what the Queen said to him, Staff Sergt. Robert Dorr of Dallas, Tex., said: "Why, she just said 'good morning' and gave me a big, beautiful smile."

At the bomber base the King and Queen inspected the famous "Memphis Belle," veteran of 26 operational missions. The King asked Capt. Robert Morgan of Asheville, N. C., commander of the bomber:

"Has this plane seen much battle damage?"

Morgan grinned, "Yes, sir, it certainly has."

Public and Bank Bond Campaigns To Be Separated

Henry Morgenthau, jr., Secretary of the Treasury, announced yesterday that the Treasury's old policy of offering securities to banks and private investors simultaneously will be dropped in the next drive for separate offerings, a plan advocated by the Federal Reserve Board.

At the same time, the Secretary revealed that the war savings staffs in the States and the Victory Fund Committees which played the major part in the first two victory loan drives will be merged to attain cohesion of effort.

Greater emphasis will be made in the September drive for a larger participation by the public in the purchase of Federal securities. In order to facilitate the sale of issues of securities to commercial banks, mutual savings banks, insurance companies and Government bond dealers, Mr. Morgenthau authorized the reserve banks as fiscal agents of the Treasury to handle sales of these financial institutions separately.

Jury Asks Fraud Indictment Against Steel Corporation

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, May 27.—A Federal grand jury late today in a presentment charged the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation and four of its employes with "concealing and destroying" records of tests on steel ship plate produced for the Government at the concern's Irvin works.

The presentment instructed U. S. Attorney Charles F. Uhl to prepare a "bill or bills" of indictment against the company and the employes, Murroy E. Stewart, chief specifications examiner; Metallurgical Inspectors David D. Ireland and Walter J. Huemrich, and Specifications Supervisor John H. McConnell.

As attorneys of the Department of Justice's war frauds staff began drawing up the formal indictments, Uhl said the presentment had covered but one phase of the Government's case involving charges of furnishing subspecification steel on war contracts.

The indictments were expected to be ready tomorrow.

The investigation stemmed from testimony before the Senate Truman Committee in March in which employes of the corporation said some tests had been faked on plate at the Irvin works for the Navy, Merchant Marine and for lend-lease orders.

The Truman Committee at the time was probing into the cause of a ship's collapse at the Kaiser shipyards on the West Coast.

Commenting tonight on the grand jury action, J. I. Perry, president of Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp., said:

"If any concealment or destruction of records occurred it was done without the knowledge or approval of the management of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp.

"I have the utmost faith in the employes of the Irvin works and believe they have done a remarkable job of production of plates vitally needed to help win this war."

Currency Plan Called Perilous

New York, May 27 (AP).—The Guaranty Trust Co. in its monthly survey asserted today the British and American world currency proposals were of a "dangerous character" and "would enable nations to buy merchandise without being able to pay for it."

"The American plan, at least," the trust company said, "would require the United States to redistribute a part of its gold in exchange for something of doubtful value—foreign currencies held by an international board. . . .

"Even a brief consideration of some of the implications of the proposals is enough to indicate their dangerous character."

OPA Files 2 Suits Totaling $7,000,000 On Whisky Sales

By the Associated Press

Louisville, Ky., May 27.—The Office of Price Administration today filed in Federal District Court here two suits for approximately seven million dollars against 48 former officers and stockholders of the dissolved Cummins Distilleries Corp., charging them with violating price ceilings on whisky and asking triple the amount of the alleged overcharges.

The suit is the largest ever filed under the Federal Emergency Price Control Act. The major suit was for $6,799,101 and the second for $160,018. The money, if awarded by a court judgment, would go into the United States Treasury.

British Planes Reported Aiding Serb Guerillas Against Nazis

By the Associated Press

London, May 27.—British planes have been aiding Yugoslav guerillas against Axis occupying armies, a German broadcast asserted today.

The Belgrade newspaper Novo Vreme was quoted as saying prisoners reported the British had promised aerial assistance and "a few British planes did arrive. Some were shot down and others brought only propaganda material."

London sources refused to comment.

Meanwhile Swiss newspapers reported from Budapest that the two factions of Yugoslav anti-Axis forces, the partisans and the troops of Gen. Draja Mihailovic, had joined forces. It said the partisans withdrew into Mihailovic territory in resisting the general Axis offensive in Bosnia, Herzegovina and Montenegro.

Mihailovic was said to be concentrating his forces in the high mountains of central Montenegro.

Delayed information said Italian officials were sending their families out of Albania in the face of increasing unrest. Albanians were reported to have demonstrated in the town of Prizren on the Yugoslav border, hanging in effigy Mussolini and King Vittorio Emanuele.

Troops reportedly fired into the demonstrators and arrested about 200 persons. Later outbreaks became so widespread police closed all public institutions and imposed martial law and curfews, it was reported.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, May 27 (AP).—The rye market ran into a technical reaction today, which grain men considered natural after the advance of the past four sessions, and prices slumped under fractions. Late selling in rye spread to wheat and oats, both of which closed on minor losses.

Although the rye pit was again the center of attention, and about twice as many brokers were present there as in the wheat pit, activity was on a considerably smaller scale than in previous days this week. Turnover in rye this week has been the heaviest in history and a new record is expected to be established for the month.

At the close rye was off 3/8 to 3/4; July, 93¾@93½; wheat was down ¼ to ½; July, 1.44¼@1.44⅛; September, 1.44¾; corn was unchanged and oats were ¼ to ⅜ lower.

Nats Beat Browns, 4-2, to Take League Lead

Early Wynn Yields Only Seven Hits

Spence Snaps Out Of Batting Slump With Four Blows; 13,600 See Game

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

The time has come to speak a bit more respectfully of the Nats. Early Wynn last night pitched them into the American League lead, no less.

With a 2-to-0 victory over the Browns achieved under the lights in the presence of 13,600 customers at Griffith Stadium, the Nats leaped nimbly to the top of the league coincident with defeats that befell the Cleevland Indians and New York Yankees yesterday.

The American League standings, which now make pleasant reading for Washington fans, follow:

Team	W.	L.	Pct.	G.B.
WASHINGTON	17	12	.567	..
Cleveland	16	13	.552	1½
New York	14	12	.538	1
Detroit	14	13	.538	1

Earlier in the day the Cleveland Indians very obligingly dropped a double beader at Boston and the Yankees took a beating from the Tigers to leave the door open for the Nats to move from third place into the lead.

Behind Wynn, the Nats seized eagerly on the chance. While the dark-haired right-hander was doing a seven-hit job on the Browns, the Nats pasted three pitchers for 10 hits, took a 3-0 lead in the second inning and were home.

Spence Gets Four Hits

Stan Spence picked this inviting occasion to explode out of his season-long batiting slump with four hits, but Wynn was the transendent hero of the proceedings. He got his first run for himself with a solid single off his own bat with hte bases full in the second inning, and he didn't give up a run until the seventh.

Al Hollingsworth, who had a brief term with the Nats three years ago, and who has been a plague to the Washington Club ever since he donned a Brownie uniform, lasted only two innings last night. The Nats got in some licks against him in the second inning for three runs.

Thereafter, Paul Dean held the Nats to one run for five innings, and Archie McKain blanked them in a one-inning stint, but the Browns were unable to catch up with Wynn.

They had him breathing hard, though, in the ninth, when they got the tying runs on base, and in that inning the Nats threw up a brilliant defense behind him to get Wynn over the hump.

George McQuinn led off the ninth witn a single to left and there was trouble written all over a line drive off Frank Hayes' bat before Alex Kampouris speared it for the first out. Floyd Baker whaled a healthy double to center to score McQuinn from first, and Don Heff-

Hartley Asks Details of Agnew Ouster

A full explanation of the sudden booting off of the District Boxing Commission of Police Lieut. John J. Agnew, who was relieved of his office Wednesday in favor of Inspector Clarence Talley, yesterday was asked by Representative Fred Hartley of New Jersey.

Hartley, "Father of Boxing in the District," whose revised boxing bill is still in committee, said he did not think the District Commissioners acted wisely in removing Agnew, especially in midterm, and hinted there might be other reasons behind his removal other than the District Commissioners' explanation that a higher ranking police official was desired to add "dignity and prestige" to the position.

Hartley praised Agnew highly for his work on the ring board. He called Agnew a "hard and conscientious worker who tackled a thankless job with zeal and did a good job of it." He styled Agnew as one of the most efficient boxing commissioners in the country.

Meanwhile, Agnew has yet to be officially notified by the District Commissioners. Other than admit he hasn't been told officially, he refuses to comment.

Pirates Rally To Beat Flock At Night, 9-5

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, May 27.—After tying the score with a three-run seventh-inning rally, the Pittsburgh Pirates added four more in a tempestuous eighth inning uprising tonight and beat the league leading Brooklyn Dodgers for the second straight time, 9 to 5.

A near riot occurred in the field during the big eighth inning uprising when Pitcher Johnny Allen rushed Umpire George Barr after he had called a balk. Allen, Freddy Fitzsimmons, Rube Melton and Lester Webber all were banished fromt he game.

Shortstop Huck Geary's stinging single with the bases packed in the eighth with the score tied, sent home two runners. When Fred Walker's throw to the plate was wide, a third run counted and Geary reached third.

Allen passed Jimmy Russell, putting men on first and third. When Barr called the balk, Geary scored and Russell moved to second. Buck Newsom relieved Allen and walked Bob Elliott. Max Macon then was called to put out the fire. He fanned Johnny Barrett and Vince DiMaggio and made Al Lopez foul out.

Bosox Beat Indians Twice; Yankees Lose

Cleveland Knocked From Lead, 2-0, 4-3; Hughson, Judd Win

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 27.—The Boston Red Sox, back at Fenway Park for an extended home stand, defeated the Cleveland Indians twice today, taking the morning encounter 2-0 and following up with a 4-3 decision over the league leaders in the afternoon game. The defeats dropped Cleveland into second place, half game behind the Washington Senators.

Oscar "Lefty" Judd piloted the Sox to their victory in the afternoon game as he kept seven Cleveland hits well scattered. It was his fourth victory against one defeat.

Jim Bagby was the victim of an uprising in the second inning during which the Sox accounted for all of their four runs. Jim Tabor doubled, Johnny Lazor and Eddie Lake singled and Roy Partee and Leon Culberson blasted doubles with all but Culberson crossing the plate.

Roy Cullenbine led off for the Indians in the ninth by parking a home-run drive into the left-field screen to chalk up the first circuit clout of the season at Fenway Park.

Tex Hughson, leading pitcher in the American League last season, limited Cleveland to five hits in the morning game and scored a 2-0 shutout.

Champs Suffer Fifth Straight Loss, 3-2; York's Homer Wins

By the Associated Press

New York, May 27.—Lefty Hal Newhouser pitched the Detroit Tigers into a tie with the New York Yankees for third place in the American League today with a 3-to-2 victory in the first meeting of the two clubs this year.

Newhouser's four-hit hurling was highlighted by 14 strikeouts, the largest total for a pitcher in a game this season. It was his second success of the year and his first triumph over the Yankees since 1941.

All of the scoring for both teams came on two home runs in the fourth inning.

In the top half of the fourth Dick Wakefield dropped a pop fly back of short for a single and Ned Harris drew the only walk given up by Atley Donald. Then Rudy York hit a lofty fly into the first row of the left-field bleachers. Charley Keller got his glove on the ball but couldn't hold it.

When the Yankees came to bat, Keller singled and Joe Gordon hit the first pitch into the upper left-field stands.

It was the fifth straight defeat for the American League champions and their seventh in eight games.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

When Stan Spence steps to the platter for the Nats, it's a sight for mystery lovers. "How to Bat .190 and Lead the American League in Driving In Runs," you could call it. That's what Spence is doing, whacky as it may seem.

POVICH

You could go back a day, before Spence collected those two hits last Wednesday night against the Browns, and offer up even a greater paradox, because on that night he was the league's leading run producer with a batting average that read only .090.

We're no great hand at solving mysteries, but there seems to be three factors which account for Spence's leadership in run-producing at a time when he isnt hitting as much as .200. Firstly, he hasn't much competition for the honors, because nobody in the league is batting in many runs. Its obvious, too, that the few hits Spence has been getting, he has been putting to good account. And lastly, the fact that a .190 hitter can lead the league in driving runs home is a tribute to the fellows who have been getting on base ahead of him, Ellis Clary and George Case.

Spence, you remember, is the fellow who hit .323 for the Nats last season and was the fourth leading hitter in the league. There was nothing fluky about that average. The guy was just a fine hitter, it was agreed. He had a great eye, a stylish stroke, and never went for a sucker pitch.

How come, then, that Spence can't get up a gallop with the bat this year? The pitching is supposed to be weaker, but you can't prove it by Spence. He hasn't been meeting the ball with anything resembling his frequency of last season. One thing we can tell you. You'll get no answer for Spence's slump by asking Spence himself. Like every guy in a slump he doesn't know the wherefore. If he did, he wouldn't be in a slump.

Spence has changed the model of his bats, and switched his stance at the plate in an attempt to shake his slump, without any immediate effects. Dat Old Debbil Slump can be awfully annoying to a hitter. We always remember Buddy Lewis who very suddenly and unaccountably couldn't buy a hit in the early weeks of the 1939 season. "I can't get comfortable up there at bat," said Buddy. "I was hitting great when last season ended, but now I can't remember how I was standing up there at the plate. I wish somebody had a picture of me, showing me what kind of a stance I was using toward the end of last season. I'd appreciate it."

There's no mystery whatsoever about what is keeping the Nats up in the first division, though. It's the club's pitching. It must be the pitching, with such as Spence hitting .190, Mickey Vernon slugging away at a .192 rate, Bob Johnson with a mere, 249 and nobody on the club hitting better than .275.

It's the pitching all right, but the club's improved infielding has helped. Manager Ossie Bluege is almost willing to argue that Gerry Priddy can do as many things as well around second base as Joe Gordon. Priddy has stepped up the club's double-play production amazingly. He has had a magic effect on Shortstop Johnny Sullivan.

Last year, Sullivan wasn't much account defensively. He was tight, erratic, had a scatter-arm, and was slow in getting his throws away. This season the transformation is amazing. Sullivan is loose, is throwing well, and is playing the pivot man's role in double plays as if the whole thing were duck soup, and he an old hand at the business.

Lieut. Col. Larry MacPhail tossed up a sucker pitch when he extended his remarks to the Touchdown Club the other day to point out the case of Paul Derringer as a type of player who didn't get the most out of himself.

"Derringer," said MacPhail, "won 62 games for me in three seasons with bad teams when I was general manager of the Reds. Under McKechnie, when Derringer was playing with good teams, he didn't do anything."

That one could be bounced right off MacPhail's noggin. He's either forgetful, or he doesn't please to give Derringer his dues, because big Paul was a better pitcher after MacPhail left the Reds than he was when MacPhail had him.

The case history of Derringer at Cincinnati shows that under MacPhail, Derringer won 66 games and lost 48. For McKechnie, he won 88 and lost 58, and had that incomparable season of 1939 when he pitched the Reds into a pennant with his 25 wins against 7 defeats.

Royal Echo Scores in Charles Town Feature

Consistent Mare Tops Five Rivals

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., May 27.—The combination of W. M. Beogher's consistent mare, Royal Echo, and Ralph (Buddy) Root, leading rider at the meeting, proved too much for five rivals today. Going in her best form, the 5-year-old mare came to the wire a length and a quarter in front of G. Gude's Teco Tack with J. Fred Adams' Wesley A. third. The group battled over the "Charles Town Course" of 120 feet more than 6 furlongs and the winner, making her year's record two victories in four tries, was clocked in 1:16 2-5. The crowd anticipated her success today and Royal Echo paid $4.60.

Teco Tack set the early pace but Royal Echo had "dead aim" on her 3-year-old rival. Root sent Royal Echo to the front on the backstretch and then booted her home. Jockey Sammy Palumbo made attempts to get Teco Tack back to the top but the daughter of Hard Tack lacked the necessary zip. Wesley A., a paddock tip, lost his chance when he stumbled leaving the gate.

Washington-owned colors visited the winner's circle in the first race after Two Straws, owned by H. R. Dulaney, jr., led all the way to bring his backers a $13.20 mutuel. Jockey Carson Kirk rode the winner which paved the way for a $30.40 pay-off in the daily double. V. S. McClintock's Some Where, a $4 favorite, won the second event. Oddly, the winners of the "double" races took the track as maidens.

E. B. Lee's Vendor's Lien proved he could carry 122 pounds and keep his winning streak intact in the fifth race. With Jockey Stanley Austin doing the booting, Vendor's Lien defeated Mrs. George Fox's Rare by a half-length, Singing Steel was third. The winner paid $3.80.

Central Rallies in Ninth And Beats Coolidge, 9 to 8

Pushing across three runs in the ninth, Central High yesterday defeated Coolidge, 9-8, at Wilson Stadium.

Trailing since the first inning, when Coolidge hopped on Hayden for five runs, the Vikings put together four hits and a base on balls to send in the winning markers. O'Fano started the rally with a single and Jamison followed suit. McHale, batting for winning pitcher Collins, walked, filling the bases. At this point, Carl Biddle inserted his third hit, sending O'Fano and Jamison across. Neb Brogan then connected for his second hit to score McHale with the winning tally.

Fairfax Defeats Trainers, 18 to 3

With Bob Payne and Miller Kellsgard combining to hurl three-hit ball, Fairfax High nine yesterday swamped National Training School, 18-3, on the N. T. S. field.

Wilson to Meet Anacostia Nine At 4 o'Clock

The first place tie in the interhigh series will be broken today when Eastern and Tech meet at Eastern at 4 p. m. The winner will move on top of the heap with the loser dropping back to second, and possibly in a tie with Woodrow Wilson, currently occupying third place. The Tigers play lowly Anacostia also today, and if they get by the Indians will be tied for second with the loser of the Tech-Eastern fray.

Outside tilts listed today are: National Training School visiting Landon, in a game between two losing clubs; Fredericksburg at George Washington High, in a Northern Virginia championship game; Gonzaga at Roosevelt, best of the nonseries games; Bethesda-Chevy Chase at Montgomery Blair, in the second meeting of the two traditional rivals; and Briarly at Fairfax.

Both Eastern and Tech have met defeat only once, and both to the same team and pitcher—Wilson and Jack Ogle. Coach "Woody" Smitherman, Ramblers mentor, will entrust the pitching duties to his ace, Dave Leonarduzzi, who pitched three good innings against Wilson earlier this week. He will be opposed by Milo Quail, second leading twirler of the series with four wins against a single loss.

Ogle, only undefeated pitcher in the series, in all probabilities will start for the Tigers against Anacostia. However, Coach Cliff Netherton may send either Josh Dorsey or Stu Brown to the hill. Joe Himmelberg, who has pitched three good games, will go for the Indians.

The day's card:
*Tech at Eastern, 4 o'clock.
*Wilson at Anacostia, 4 o'clock.
National Training School at Landon, 3:30 o'clock.
Fredericksburg at George Washington High, 3:45 o'clock.
Gonzaga at Roosevelt, 4 o'clock.
Bethesda-Chevy Chase at Montgomery Blair, 3:30 o'clock.

ner clouted a long ball into right center that was marked "trouble," but George Case dragged it down after a long run for the second out.

Sullivan's fumble of Kreevich's grounder put the tying run on base for the Browns, but Pinchhitter Vernon Stephens ended matters happily for the Nats with a pop-up to Priddy.

Wynn Singles for Run

The Nats' second inning was a dismal affair for Hollingsworth. He walked Kampouris to start it and on Sullivan's grounder, Gutteridge flipped a wild throw to second. Jake Early pushed a bunt past Hollingsworth to fill the bases with none out. Wynn got a run home with a single to right, Case moved another home with a fly to center, and Spence got the third in with an infield out.

The Nats got a run off Dean in the fifth after two were out. Kampouris was hit by a pitched ball, stole second and scored on Sullivan's single. The Browns picked up their first run in the seventh after Wynn walked McQuinn. Hayes singled and Baker followed with a single to center, but when Hayes tried to move to third on that latter blow, Spence's throw cut him down. Priddy started a double play on Schultz's grounder to halt the damage.

And so there the Nats are up in the league lead. Don't they look natural?

STUDIES IN SCARLET. Arlene Wayne, who tap steps exquisitely to classic overtures at the Casino Royal, looks like a floating poppy in a midriff frock of red chiffon with long sleeves. . . . People batted their eyes in Copocabana the other night when they saw that stunning blonde in a scarlet suit set off with Kelly green hat, gloves and shoes. . . . Basil Ivanoff, dagger dancer of the Balalaika, wears bright red flannel panties and a muffler with his gold bedecked white cossack coat. . . . Blonde Shirley Dulo of Paul Young's is always lovely, but she becomes positively dazzling when she slips into her cherry-red formal. . . . The El Patio publicity bureau bubbles with the news that a red-headed woman is sending gardenias to Little Jack Little. Probably that gal that inspired the "St. Louis Blues." . . . Olmsted's restaurant, all serene greens and beiges otherwise, is a flamboyant study in scarlet when it comes to the bar. . . . And for a real symphony in red, take a peek at some of the sloe gin rickeys they're serving in the Willard Room now that summer's here.

Gas or no gas, Jack Rowe's is still right on the car line, for which all good Rowe patrons will be thankful this weekend. That goes for Kavakos Grill, too, which is perched strategically at the intersection of two carlines.

WMC Workers Start Troop Smokes Fund

Employes in the reports section of War Manpower Commission will send a case of 10,000 cigarettes each payday to the boys overseas.

The 80 employes in the section yesterday raised $33 to start the cigarette fund. . . . At the Board of Economic Warfare employes have raised enough money to buy an Army ambulance in honor of Lieut. George Perkins, who died last week in an Army plane crash. Lieutenant Perkins was son of Milo Perkins, head of BEW . . . Employes at Agriculture are planning some sort or donation to the war program. Monday, several thousand employes will work an extra hour in memory of their colleagues who have died in World War II. These are just a few of the ways in which employes are showing the Nation they know a war is going on.

Burlesque definitions of red tape phases and Government words continue to pour in. Here is the latest batch:

"Management expert"—a person who cuts so much red tape that he makes a mess of everything.

"Government expert"—a person who specializes in a narrow field so that every day he gets to know more and more about less and less until he finally knows everything about nothing.

"File this"—lose, if possible. If anyone calls we never heard of the case.

"Prepare this for my signature"—you do the work, I'll take the credit, but if anything is wrong you take the blame.

"A professor"—is a person who teaches you how to avoid the pitfalls of life which he himself avoided by becoming a professor and then seeks refuge in the Government service.

"Government lecture"—a process by which contents of the lecturer's notebook find their way into employes' notebooks without passing through the minds of either.

See me"—I'm lonesome.

If you don't like the definitions, send us yours. It's fun and a good laugh will help you through the day.

A. B. Strom, ace postal inspector, has been appointed special assistant to Kildroy Aldrich, No. 2 man at Postoffice . . . The Pentagon shopping service will be opened the middle of next week. This service will help employes solve their shopping problems. Through the service, Pentagon employes will be able to purchase goods via phone and have them delivered at the building. Small items such as stockings can be purchased direct at the service . . . Civil Service is recruiting mechanics, helpers and laborers for West Coast Navy Yards, Hawaii and Panama. Expenses will be paid to your station.

OPA Boss Prentiss Brown will return to the hospital for another minor operation after he completes his current operation on OPA . . . Insiders now believe the McKellar bill, which would require thousands of Federal employes to be confirmed by the Senate, has been definitely shelved. New opposition developed in Senate and even if the bill gets through the upper house it's a good bet it'll soak up dust in the House Civil Service Committee . . . The committee yesterday, incidentally, jumped on Donald Stone, Budget Bureau official, for permitting overstaffing in new war agencies. Stone is head of the administrative management division and Chairman Ramspeck believes it the key unit in Government to prevent overstaffing, idleness, overlapping and general inefficiency. That's why the division was created.

The Army solved its manpower problem in Schenectady by organizing a group of civilian commandos. And it's working swell. Officials in hard-pressed agencies here would do well to study the commando plan. In Schenectady is located a giant quartermaster depot where thousands are employed. It has rush periods during which its regular employes can't meet the deadlines. Part-time labor couldn't be hired so the commanding officer organized a group of 1500 civilian commandos—lawyers, doctors, dentists and shopkeepers in Schenectady—to work nights and on Sunday when the rush is on . . . Regular wages are paid, invested mostly in war bonds. The commandos vie with the regular employes to see which group can turn out the most work. Moreover, residents of the New York city have a real understanding of th war. It would be grand if something similar could be worked out in Federal agencies here.

Chester Davis is mapping out a reorganization of his War Food Administration. His program will be decentralized and the food production agency shaken down . . . Joe Tufts of War Manpower, has been appointed chief of National Housing's regional office at Chicago . . . The coal dispute is slated to be settled over the weekend.

At the Battle Ground National Cemetery, on Georgia Avenue in Brightwood, Senator Alexander Wiley (Republican) of Wisconsin, will make an address. The Navy School of Music Band will play and Francesco Della-Lane will sing.

This program, which is in charge of the Grand Army of the Republic, was arranged by a committee under the direction of John M. Kline, sr., past department commander and one of the few remaining survivors of the G. A. R.

At Arlington Memorial Bridge in West Potomac Park, services will begin at 11 a. m. The Fleet Reserve Association, Branch No. 4, and the U. S. Navy School of Music Band will participate.

National Capitol Post, 127, Veterans of Foreign Wars, will conduct memorial services at 8 p. m. at the Metropolitan Baptist Church, A and Sixth Streets Northwest.

At 7:45 p. m. today memorial services by the Jewish War Veterans and the G. A. R. Memorial Corporation will follow the massing of the colors at Adas Israel Congregation, Sixth and I Streets Northwest.

At Holy Rood Cemetery, Thirty-fifth Street and Wisconsin Avenue Northwest, the twenty-third annual memorial service for Union veterans of the Civil War will be held at 5 p. m. tomorrow by the William B. Cushing Auxiliary, No. 4, of the Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War.

Tomorrow, the Woman's Relief Corps, Department of the Potomac, an auxiliary to the Grand Army of the Republic, will hold its annual Memorial Day services in honor of the Nuns of the Battlefield, who nursed Civil War veterans, at the statue erected for them at Rhode Island Avenue and M Street Northwest, at 6:30 p. m.

Dog Trappers' Arrest Sought By Society

Humane Society officials last night agreed to seek a warrant for the arrest of a Northeast home owner in whose back yard a German shepherd dog was caught in a baited steel trap.

His left front paw held in a vise-like grip by the steel jaws, the dog was a prisoner for nearly an hour before police and a veterinarian freed him from the trap, which was in a back yard in the 200 block of Fifth Street Northeast.

Baited with a large hunk of meat, the trap apparently was set, police stated, to protect a victory garden. It consisted of a steel spring-type trap set between two boards. The meat hung from a wire suspended between the two boards.

Policemen T. E. Howie and J. B. Southard, Ninth Precinct, found the animal after being attracted by his whimpering. Unable to free him because of his snapping jaws, the officers summoned Maurice Blalock, veterinarian.

Man Jumps to Death From Highway Bridge

A Negro man, said to be about 30 years old, jumped from the Highway Bridge last night to his death. His body was recovered by Pvts. Lemuel Bailles and Paul Baicar, of the harbor police. Identification was not immediately established.

The man was seen to jump by Lieuts. David J. Andrew and L. P. Frost, of Fort Belvoir, Va.

Harris & Ewing

Rear Admiral L. I. Chalker swears in Mrs. James Munro as a lieutenant, junior grade, in the Spars. A picture of her Guadalcanal hero son is shown in the background

Only two hours after President Roosevelt had given her the Congressional Medal of Honor, awarded posthumously to Douglas A. the mother of the heroic Coast Guardsman joined the SPARS, Women's Reserve of the Coast Guard here yesterday.

Sworn in by Rear Admiral L. T. Chalker, assistant commandant, Mrs. James Munro will enter the officers' candidate school of the SPARS at New London, Conn., when the next class starts.

"Did they get off?" were Munro's last words after he had volunteered to evacuate a detachment of marines from a tough spot on Guadalcanal September 27, 1942, when he was fatally wounded.

"Munro, under constant risk of his life, daringly led five of his small craft toward the shore. As he closed the beach, he signalled the others to land, and then in order to draw the enemy's fire and protect the heavily loaded boats, he valiantly placed his craft with its two small guns as a shield between the beachhead and the Japanese. When the perilous task of evacuation was nearly completed, Munro was killed by enemy fire."

James Munro, husband, is a lieutenant in the Washington State Guard Reserve and their daughter, Mrs. John B. Sheehan, tried to enlist in the SPARS but was turned down because she was underweight.

Mrs. Munro, slim, blue-eyed, brown-haired and 48, is English born and an American citizen through marriage. She is the sister of Lieut. Col. Francis Trower-Fairey, Royal Irish Fusiliers of Canada, and the minister of technical education for British Columbia. Four of her brothers fought with the Canadians in the first World War. Two of them were wounded.

Victory Sidelights

Youth Awarded Title of Admiral For Model Planes, to Join Navy

Washington's first admiral in the Army-Navy model airplane project wants nothing more than a seaman's rating with a chance to attend Navy photographic school.

Joseph Franklin Tenschert, 18-year-old Central High School student, will today receive the Navy certificate awarding him the top rank for building 50 planes for military research. Since March, 1942, when the program was instituted at Central under auspices of the U. S. Office of Education, he's been building at home and at school to reach the goal before graduation next month. And a few days before graduation he intends to volunteer his services to the Navy, with special emphasis on his photographic abilities.

For the past six years Joe has devoted as much time as he could to model planes and photography. He had quite a collection of his own before he began building for the Navy, meanwhile taking pictures for the school yearbook, paper and magazine. Currently he's working on a project of 35 Bristol Beauford planes, 24 of which he has completed and were included in the award-winning 50.

The son of Joe Tenschert, also a photographer of 1440 Meridian Place Northwest, Joe is a Washington native. He will be 19 on August 3.

More than $100,000 worth of war bonds toward the cost of a medium-sized bomber have been sold by the Washington Chapter of Hadassah in little more than a month, Mrs. Harry L. Lourie, chairman of the drive, announced yesterday.

The local campaign, which is part of a Nation-wide drive conducted by the women's organization, started late in April and it is hoped that the full $175,000 for the bomber can be raised before the group recesses for the summer. Co-chairman of the drive is Mrs. William Rosendorf.

Awarded Silver Medal

Cadet John Savage Bath, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Bath of Washington, received yesterday a silver medal at a review at The Citadel, South Carolina military college. He was member of the winning company team in the school's annual Washington light infantry small bore competition.

Failure of Brace Breaks Boy's Leg

Charles Brice, 14, of 2132 O Street Northwest, a student at the Health School for Crippled Children, suffered a broken right leg yesterday when the braces holding his crippled leg broke as he was leaving the school.

The boy is confined to Emergency Hospital with a compound fracture of the leg. The accident occurred as he was walking along the street near the school.

Low Ceiling Held Bar To Spud Sales

Wholesale Markets Place Blame on OPA; Report Onions Also Hard to Obtain

While a trickle of potatoes abated somewhat the severity of the spud famine here, District residents yesterday were beginning to feel the pinch of a shortage in onions.

Wholesale produce dealers asserted there were not five bags of onions to be obtained on the wholesale market late in the day.

They blamed price ceilings which act to squeeze the wholesaler out of the picture, caught as he is between increased ceiling prices to farmers and frozen prices to the consumer.

While potatoes are supposed to sell at $2.70 a hundred pounds on the farm in South Carolina, one dealer said he had been told by a grower that he would sell to itinerant truckers and at not less than $3.75 a hundred pounds.

And So to Black Market

These will find their way to black markets, dealers said.

Despite the fact that there is a scarcity of lettuce in the city a carload of the produce, from California was rejected by local dealers because it had been improperly packed and its quality was poor.

As the result of the new price ceilings thriving black market conditions were predicted. Legitimate dealers will be unable to secure any spuds on which they will be allowed any appreciable profit, so they will eliminate them from their stocks, one dealer asserted.

Grocer Sentenced

In the meantime, George Maier, retail grocer of 2200 Minnesota Avenue Southeast, was sentenced yesterday to pay a fine of $300 or serve 90 days in jail for violating the price ceiling regulation in sale of potatoes. He was the second retail grocer here to be fined for such a violation.

The fine was recommended by OPA Attorney John Laskey, who disclosed that Maier had been most cooperative in providing information relative to "the potato situation in the District." Maier, who pleaded guilty, was charged with selling potatoes for 15 cents per pound, 6 cents above the ceiling.

Ten other grocers who have been charged with violating OPA regulations have yet to be tried.

Driver Booked On 6 Charges After Chase

A 38-year-old garage operator was released under $3500 bail at Hyattsville, Md., last night as a result of an 11-mile chase through Washington and Prince Georges County.

The suspect, Leo Donovan of Colmar Manor, was booked on charges of driving while drunk, failing to slow down for pedestrian, speeding more than 70, assault on a policeman, disorderly conduct and extinguishing lights to avoid arrest.

Here's the story as reported by police.

Two Washington policemen, Claude Eilert and Malcolm Leubkart, Second Precinct, discovered two men near a car at North Capitol and Decatur Streets. When they approached the men jumped into a sedan and aped away. They managed to elude the police at Fourth Street and Florida Avenue Northeast.

A short time later Scout Car Patrolmen A. E. Sweeney and James G. Beach, Twelfth Precinct, spotted a similar car speeding along Bladensburg Road. They gave chase and were joined by Prince Georges County officers at the District Line.

The cars raced through Bladensburg, Md., out the Defense Highway to Cheverly and Tuxedo. The fugitive car then headed back to Bladensburg Road and thence to Colmar Manor where it was stopped by a dead-end street.

The car had only one occupant giving rise to the questions of whether there were two fugitive cars or just one which stopped in its flight to discharge a passenger.

Montrose P.-T. A. Reelects Officers

All officers were reelected at the May meeting of the Montrose Parent-Teacher Association. They are: Mrs. Joseph R. Ertter, president; Mrs. Howard Leighton; Henry Duckworth, secretary; John P. Keiser, treasurer.

Patriotic songs were rendered by Mrs. Floyd Peigh, accompanied by Mrs. Rudy Will, and there was a solo by Donald James, of the third grade. It was announced that the closing exercises of the Montrose school will be June 11 under direction of the principal, Mrs. Grace Howes.

Vice Drive Linked to Espionage In Capital by U. S. Official

Suspected espionage activities and the spread of disease were given yesterday by Assistant United States Attorney John W. Fihelly as the two prime reasons why the United States attorney's office is determined to halt the encroachment of vice within the District.

Fihelly's opinion came yesterday when he demanded from Justice Matthew F. McGuire in District Court an early trial date in the case of "Dr." Anna May Swift, charged by the Government with numerous violations of the White Slave Act allegedly occurring when she operated a de luxe call house from a $17,000 abode at 7 Raymond Street, Chevy Chase, Md., and another establishment in the 1700 block Church Street Northwest.

Fihelly told the court that for the past several months she had been successful in postponing her trial date on the basis of supposed illness. He said that on two occasions when her counsel informed his office that Mrs. Swift was too ill to appear in court, and as lately as last Monday, when her illness was said to be so serious as to even prevent her from seeing her attorney, she was up and around in Washington.

Demands Her Presence

At yesterday's session her attorney, M. J. Sawyer, was asked bluntly by Fihelly where Mrs. Swift was then, inasmuch as her trial was scheduled to begin. Sawyer replied that at that moment she was in his office.

Fihelly then demanded that either the woman be produced in court or that the $10,000 bond, under which she is held, be forfeited. It was only a matter of minutes before Mrs. Swift appeared in the courtroom and was officially told by the court that she would have to stand trial June 14.

The suggestion of subversive activities was introduced in the proceedings when Fihelly told the court that Army and Navy personnel had frequented one of the establishments and that Government officials were interested to know if military information had been gathered.

A large advertisement in the back of the telephone directory was one of the methods used by Mrs. Swift to inform her prospective clients that, under the name of Mary Cira Barr, she operated a massage parlor at the Chevy Chase, Md., address specializing in "electrical modalities and physiotherapy." These activities are described by Fihelly as being the front for the more lucrative business of prostitution.

Immediately under the Mary Cira Barr advertisement in the telephone directory was one for the Hopkins Institute, 2701 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, also described as a massage parlor.

The Hopkins Institute was raided in February by the FBI and the Metropolitan Police. A number of women were arrested and white slave charges lodged against the operators.

A white slave case disposed of yesterday was that against Lewis Grigby, 32, a taxidriver. The man was convicted in District Court before Justice Bolitha J. Laws of transporting two girls here from West Virginia for immoral purposes. An alleged partner of Grigsby, Mrs. John Gamble, is now serving an eight-month to two-year sentence at Occoquan under the same charges in the indictment on which Grigsby was tried. She turned State's evidence.

Va. Worker Electrocuted

Williamsburg, Va., May 27 (A.P.).—George Brown Rary, 24, of Statesville, N. C., was electrocuted near Lightfoot today while working as a heavy machine operator. Rary was employed by Doyle & Russell, contractors at Camp Peary.

Pepco Appeals Rate Slash Of $310,408

The Potomac Electric Power Co. last night appealed against the $310,408 rate reduction ordered for its consumers for 1943 by the Public Utilities Commission.

The filing of this application for reconsideration of the April 27 rate order came only two days after the PUC had refused an application for reconsideration by the Office of Price Administration and other Federal intervenors in the case.

Alleging six errors in the order, the power company stated that the "findings and conclusions of the commission are unreasonable and will occasion substantial and irreparable property loss and lessened revenue to the company."

The Federal petition listed 44 errors in the order and asked that a reduction of at least 1 million dollars be substituted for the $310,000 ordered.

Pepco asked that the order be set aside or stayed until the determination of its legal validity "in the event that the PUC is of the opinion that this application does not act as a stay." The Federal intervenors had asked that the order be not set aside pending reconsideration lest the consumers lose the benefits "however minor" of the order in the meantime.

The exceptions that Pepco claimed are exclusion of $1,429,644 difference between book cost and consent decree value in the rate base, exclusion of Federal income taxes in excess of 31 per cent and ordering of the reduction despite the fact that the company earnings in 1942 were less than the basic 6 per cent rate of return established by the sliding scale arrangement.

Better Ways Sought to Adjust Warworker to Capital Scene

Production of a motion picture showing life in wartime Washington as it really is and utilization of the OWI rural press service for publication of accurate data were yesterday suggested as means of assuring better adjustment to the Washington scheme among the incoming warworkers.

They were among the recommendations presented at an Institute on War and Postwar Problems, in which rural and urban specialists in the various phases of the situation participated.

Background to the problem, which rises from the accelerated migration of young people from the farms to war centers, was offered by a group of agricultural experts led by O. E. Baker, specialist in population trends for the Agriculture Department.

Baker emphasized the factors which are drawing youth from rural areas such as war demands and farm mechanization, adding that a reversal of th situation is arising as fod surpluses decrease and the use of agricultural products in industry develops. Indicating the possible future of agriculture, he predicted larger commercial farms and more part-time farms, as the men now farming reach senility and youth refuses to return to the farm for full financial support.

Education was offered as a solution to many of the problems confronting the new warworkers, as several of the committees upheld its vital position in the three periods under consideration—premigration, postmigration and postwar.

Recommendations proposed by a committee on occupational problems included provision of more complete information on the character and consequences of Government work, more efficient recruiting methods, and more adequate in-service training, supervising programs and job adjustment services.

Keynoting the program at the session yesterday morning, Mrs. Elizabeth Jones Alexander, executive secretary of the Travelers Aid Society of Washington, depicted the various phases of the problems confronting the incoming workers.

Noting that many of the difficulties, although they have their roots in the home community, become the responsibility of the adopted community, she said: "The agencies recruiting the workers must do a more intensive job in investigating their background and character. They must be more selective in the group they import, for, under the pressure of wartime Washington, latent problems become exceedingly complicated."

The part which the rural press can play in distributing such information was explained by Charles Allen, director of the OWI rural press, who said that the job of his office was not to manufacture news but digest for small papers news supplied by Government agencies.

President Roosevelt yesterday sent to the Senate the renomination of Chairman James H. Flanagan of Public Utilities Commission for another three-year term. Flanagan's present term expires June 30.

The President's reappointment came just after it had been revealed that Gregory Hankin, perennial dissenting member of the PUC, had appealed to Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes to bring charges he had made against Flanagan to the attention of the President.

Hankin, whose sharp differences of opinion with Flanagan have been published in his voluminous minority opinions on almost every PUC order of the past year, stated his message to the White House delivered just at the time when Flanagan's reappointment was due for consideration was "only a chronological coincidence." He had no comment to make last night on the renaming of his colleague.

Flanagan was appointed to the Public Utilities Commission in February, 1942, to fill the unexpired term of Riley Elgin, who died while a member of the PUC. He is a native of Newton, Mass.

His term on the Public Utilities Commission has been marked with adjustment of Washington utilities to wartime tempo. The three major issues arising during this time were group riding in taxicabs and rate adjustments of Washington Gas Light Co. and Potomac Electric Power Co.

Flanagan replaced Hankin as chairman of the PUC by a majority vote of the commission just before the first hearing on the gas rate case.

Of his reappointment Flanagan said: "Naturally I am delighted. Most of all, I am proud of the trust reposed in me by the President. My only interest will be to prove that this trust is not misplaced.

Druggists Give Quinine to Aid Armed Forces

Quinine—red, pink, white and chocolate colored quinine tablets—was contributed last night by the druggists of Washington to the armed forces—the entire local stock in fact—in order to help combat malaria among America's fighting men in jungle and mosquito-infested country.

The occasion was a rally at the Shoreham Hotel staged by the District Pharmaceutical Association to raise supplies of the badly needed drug. Included in the capsules, powders, and pills were some brought from Germany. The collection of packages bore the trade name of every noted firm in the country, and from many foreign lands, as well as Germany.

Quinine collection in this country was started by President Manuel Prado of Peru, when he brought 110 pounds, valued at $2500, as a gift to President Roosevelt, to point up the fact that most of the drug was imported from territory now occupied by Japan.

The President contributed it to the national quinine drive through the local Pharmaceutical Association last night, and a letter of transmittal from him was read by Lieut. E. G. Dennis of the Navy Hospital Corps, who received on behalf of the armed forces.

Some of the gifts will be put directly to use, but quinine not in sealed packages will be put with other contributions from the country at large for reprocessing and purifying.

Dr. Louis S. Bradley was installed as president of the association. Others installed were Benjamin Striner, first vice president; David Maxwell, second vice president; Paul Reznek, third vice president; J. E. Donaldson, fourth vice president; Harold Kinner, secretary; Roger Lusby, treasurer; W. Paul Briggs, W. H. Whittlesey, S. F. Higger, executive committee, and Vincent Norelli and Orlando Hall, delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Two-thousand dollars worth of bonds were marketed also during its evening session.

Local Manpower Administrator R. B. Deschner told pharmacists during the afternoon session about the District employment, stabilization plan and invited them to apply to come under it if they wished.

David Maxwell of Maxwell and Tennyson pharmacies was nominated for recommendation to the Commissioners as an appointee on the local Board of Pharmacy. He would replace Dr. Bradley whose term expires June 30 and who has declined reappointment. Dr. Bradley has been a member of the board 20 years and its secretary for 7 years.

Your Baby and Mine

By Martha Meyer Eldred

There is no one answer which will cover all questions about "how much" time a child should spend at the radio. Obviously, a child's amusements should be balanced between active and passive ones, but listening to the radio is a passive amusement demanding nothing from a child but a pair of ears.

Any child who is made nervous, excitable or sleepless by radio programs or who neglects his active play to stay pasted to the radio is being harmed, not amused, by its entertainment. Only the mother of each individual child can determine that.

Mrs. E. D.: Obviously your 5-year-old child is overdoing his radio listening. He needs companionship, and surely it can be found in the neighborhood in which you live, if you understand the vital necessity for it.

You are taking the easy road, as is the child, when you allow such hour-long absorption in this passive entertainment. Allow a few programs and shut the radio off at other times. He is living a phantom existence in an unreal world and he won't leave it unless forced to do so. It is too satisfying.

Mrs. P.: You know, from all I have written, I am heartily in favor of arbitration and compromise in all the problems which have to do with in-laws. Each should lean over backward to make this a happy, satisfying relationship.

In your case your daughter should take firm steps to insure that her doctor's advice is not being overruled by her mother-in-law. She is living with the parents-in-law, not from choice but because they need her. Her own liberty of action should not be jeopardized by this association. The baby must be fed as the doctor has advised, no matter what the grandmother did with her own children (one-fourth of whom died in infancy)—or how successful she thought it was. She is not the one to decide; the mother is.

No harm can come to the baby as long as the mother, in full appreciation of the rightness of her contention, insists that she shall have freedom to do as she pleases. No compromise is possible, with good feeding and the child's health at stake.

Our leaflet, "Weaning from Bottle to Cup," may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

Mary Haworth's Mail

After Four Months in Army, Man Goes Home To Find Sweetheart No Longer Loves Him; His Life Has Been a Bad Dream Ever Since

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For the past 16 months I have been a member of the armed forces. Two years before the war started I met a young lady of the very highest quality and after going together for some time, we learned to love each other very deeply. Nothing in the world meant more to me than she did. We were constant associates until the war came, and then I was compelled to leave her to join the service. At the time I left, she promised to wait faithfully until I returned. But four months after I was inducted, I went home on furlough;—and at that time she told me she had lost "what she had thought" was her love for me. She said that "distance and separation" were the main factors that had caused the change.

I went back to camp and tried to find other interests to help me forget her; but every girl I met had some trait about her that reminded me of Betty, so I couldn't get her off my mind. I have been home six times in the past 14 months and have seen her on several occasions. I kept nursing a small ray of hope that she might learn to care for me again as she had before. But the last time I saw her, she told me she meant it when she quit me; that she liked me "only as a friend;" and that it was out of the question that she would ever love me again. I can't forget her or that statement. I have tried to, time and again; but I always end up writing to her and receiving no answer.

I had hoped that by corresponding with other girls, I might sooner forget her; but all the girls I have met since then, who promised to write, never kept their promise. The only person who writes to me is my mother,—the one person a soldier can depend upon to wait for him and write. However, I realize that being a soldier shouldn't deprive me of that happiness so many others are enjoying. I have tried all types of hobbies, reading, attending dances and even working exceptionally hard for promotion in the ranks, but everything has failed thus far. If you could just show me some way to forget this girl and gain even a small part of that happiness I am looking for, I will be ever so grateful. Can you help me?

P. F. C.

Man Should Discover Why He's Wallflower

DEAR P. F. C.: It seems to me you have a bigger problem here than you realize. The fact that you find yourself a male wallflower, so to speak, since Betty threw you over, suggests that your failure to find "that happiness you are looking for," is due primarily to personality defects and not to circumstances. You have noticed, you say, that "many others are enjoying that happiness;" and I suppose you are referring to fellow servicemen. If the average fellow in your outfit can somehow combine military regimentation with sentimental divertissement, opportunity affording,—why can't you? That's the question.

The answer must be: Because you lack "come-hither" for the ladies. And when you consider that individual ideas concerning what constitutes charm in the opposite sex differ so widely—so that one girl may fall head over heels in love with a guy that her best friend "wouldn't look at,"—and further reflect that you haven't been able to promote an exchange of letters with any of the many girls you have recently met, it certainly leads to the conclusion that you are "plenty lacking." The fact that you have been down in the dumps over Betty's change of heart doesn't explain this state of affairs. Many a man in the same low mood, for the same reason, has been triumphantly grabbed at by some other girl, who was only too glad to step into the breach and soothe his melancholy,—because, from HER viewpoint, he either bore the earmarks of manly perfection or looked like "promising material."

Seems a Likely Lad, By Surface Account

A young man is in a bad way, generally speaking, who must go off to war with the cold comfort of knowing that, in a world full of women, only his mother's heart is yearning after him. And that is your predicament, as you see it. I should like to be able to tell you how to snap out of it; but in order to give you intelligent counsel, I would first need to know what shortcomings of yours have brought you to this pass. There is nothing in your letter to throw light on that subject; and much, indeed, to intensify the mystery. For instance, you say you have recently busied yourself with "all types of hobbies, reading, attending dances and even working exceptionally hard for promotion,"—all of which suggests a normally resourceful, aggressive male temperament: a creditable performance by a likely lad.

Could it be that in association with girls, since losing Betty, you have been listless and self-centered, largely leaving it to them to take the initiative in promoting friendship? In exacting promises from girls "to write," did you go on the assumption that they were to make the first move; send you the first letter? Or did you carefully take down the name and address,—as you should have, of course, if you hoped for the favor of their correspondence,—and follow through in a few days with a newsy "howdy-do" and happy reminder that you were waiting in suspense for that promised letter? Did you make the effort to get properly introduced to girls whose friendship you would value,—so that they might feel safe inside the bounds of propriety in writing to you? And so that, if they kept you waiting too long for a letter, you could track them down by telephone and say, in effect: "Listen, gal, you're a traitor to your country. You're sabotaging my morale. How do you expect me to lick Hitler when I don't get a letter from you? This is a matter for the FBI."

By Giving Happiness, One Outgrows Grief

When girls are so kind as to lend you an ear, or an evening of their time, do you tell them how gorgeous, etc., they are, and try to show them a wonderful time? Or do you take opportunity to tell them how, by the shape of their nose, they remind you of Betty, the gal who is breaking your heart?—and then proceed to unburden your saga of sorrow? Remember the proverb: "He who would have friends must show himself friendly." If you want girls to like you, you've got to feel,—and "give out,"—a liking for them, as exceptional individuals. Suppose you spent an evening with a chance-met girl, who couldn't "see" you for thinking of some old beau who had given her the gate,—wouldn't you find her a pain in the neck? And swear to yourself, "No more of that drizzle-puss for me?" Probably the best way to find happiness and outgrow Betty,—which is, after all, the only way to "forget" her,—is to distribute among other girls that fund of affection and interest and reverence you had erstwhile "saved" for Betty, finally to have it thrown back in your face. In other words, make it your program to GIVE happiness wherever you go; and I wager you will come around all right.

Serve Whole-Grain Cereal

Do you make a habit of serving 100 per cent whole grain cereal and bread at least 50 per cent of the time and choose the enriched variety the rest of the time? Then you are doing all right by your family in that direction. The Department of Health in New York City points out that sometimes the lady of the house avoids breads, cereals and potatoes for fear of putting on weight, and that she slights the other members of the family in this respect. That's no way to treat a family. It is recommended that the housewife keep her calories down by curtailing fats and sweets.

Your Figure Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

The lunch you either have to pack and carry or forage for at some canteen or corner drugstore is the hardest meal to fit into the day's plan for good nutrition. But help is on the way. Doctors and nutritionists all over the country seem bent on figuring out how this meal can be made to furnish the foods that keep you feeling fit and rearing to work.

Some of the most practical suggestions I have come across are given in an article by Dr. Alice H. Smith, which appeared in the Ohio State Medical Journal. One of the first things Dr. Smith urges you to keep in mind is that the less money you have for food, the more important it becomes to have milk, the whole grain products and citrus fruit or tomatoes in the diet.

Sandwiches, regulation fare for lunch, can be low or high in food value. To make them measure up nutritionally, use or choose whole grain bread with a filler of cheese, eggs, peanut butter, fish, or meat—lean ham, whenever you can get it. A cheese filler counts toward your day's milk requirement.

If you have a beverage made of cocoa, ask for the old fashioned kind made with real milk, rather than the cocoa, sugar and hot water mixture that is usually served with a dab of cream floating on top. The milk mixture is the beter buy. To cut calories, leave off the cream.

Unless the vegetables are expertly cooked, the doctor says you'll do better to have them at home. If your work is not too strenuous, the chef's salad bowl is a good choice and cheese and fruit salad combinations are apt to be higher in protective value than the plate lunches, particularly when the vegetables have been overcooked, or cooked the night before and allowed to stand on the steam table throughout the morning and noon hour.

A soup and a salad—the soup made with milk, or the salad with cheese—makes a good light lunch. But if you want something hearty you can depend on staples like baked beans with brown bread or macaroni and cheese.

No one meal adds up to good nutrition so Dr. Smith suggests a breakfast of whole grain cereal, milk and fruit, or whole grain toast and milk or a milk beverage and fruit. At dinner, you must make up the essential foods not included at the other two meals.

A Seat on the Aisle

By Jeanne Contini

The successful staging of your descent from a train these days, looking more the way you hope he remembered you than like a much-sat-upon sofa pillow, depends largely on what you wear for the journey. A couple of hours on somebody's suitcase in a jiggling vortex of babies, dowagers, and assorted members of the armed forces is likely to make any woman feel non-essential . . . even if her avowed mission is to brighten the furlough of One of the Boys. We know whereof we speak, having made such a trip locked in the baggage car between Altoona and Harrisburg because the latter represented the only uncluttered floor space on the train.

Remember, from now on it will be hot in almost every direction. A suit has always been the orthodox prescription for correct traveling, but a stoic fight for our equilibrium in the middle of an aisle is hardly "correct." In our opinion, a dress has it all over any suit for comfort and the come-back-itude. The ideal is freshly dark as to color . . . preferably print because it's a better camouflage for both soot and crumples; it is light in weight and easy in the cut — both of skirt and bodice—to allow you the utmost relaxation.

Here are two models which incorporate all the foregoing attributes and adding fashion interest. Incidentally, as coat styles, they can be pressed in two minutes on arrival. Both are rayon chiffon and come with their own crisply, swishing slips. Both are trimmed in grosgrain and have soft, full skirts. Both are the sort of dress you will wear and wear because it looks right any time, any place.

News of the Women's Clubs

By Genevieve Reynolds

"Woman's place is no longer most essential at the lathe or the drop forge, but in the forefront of the crusade for a new free world." So declared Dr. Paul F. Douglas, president of American University, guest speaker at the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs' annual luncheon meeting yesterday, held in the Statler Hotel.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

"Do not be deceived," he warned, "this world will not come quickly or easily."

Recalling that 72 years elapsed between the Declaration of Sentiments of 1848 and the enactment of the nineteenth amendment in August, 1920, Dr. Douglas emphasized the difficulty of changing the attitudes and institutions to accommodate principles which seem to reason like a prima-facie case.

Quoting Carrie Chapman Catt, probably the greatest woman leader in the United States, Dr. Douglas said, "Women invented language and women have been good talkers ever since." Let them use their invention to show men the folly of war, he urged.

Again referring to Mrs. Catt, he pointed out that she still recalls the difficulties of the battle to make woman free and that she knows how hard the present task is even if one does not agree with her that "the affairs of the world are askew because the male possesses a dominating superiority and the female a surrendering inferiority complex."

Dr. Douglas compared the Infantry action of Tunisia with the fight to win the peace. "Wars are won in the end by the Infantry action, by confident professional skill, by man-to-man action," he asserted. "And the crusade for peace will be won by this same inch-by-inch advance, by women who have a confident professional skill in the mobilized persuasive agencies of peace. Then, perhaps, they will be able to join with the private from Tunisia who wrote to his father:

"Well, dad, we stopped the best they have."

Totalitarian war has shattered all the traditions and liquidated all the mythologies surrounding women. And in the process, the last quadrennium has given the United States the highest marriage rate, the highest juvenile delinquency rate and the highest divorce rate in the history of America, according to Dr. Douglas, who averred that, "Women's place in winning the war is to take the leadership in making peace a success."

Following Dr. Douglas' speech, Mrs. Hester Beal Provensen, member of the faculty of Maryland University, talked on "Responses." Mrs. Arthur C. Watkins, president of the federation, presided and introduced the honored guests and presidents of the clubs affiliated with the organization. A musical program preceded the main speeches of the day. Approxmately 300 guests were present.

At the annual meeting Wednesday winners in the Penny award contest were announced and awarded.

Soroptomist Club

Miss Mary I. Barber, chief dietitian of the War Department, spoke yesterday at the Soroptimist Club luncheon. Her subject was "Nutrition for the Soldier and the Civilian." Miss Barber pointed out that the greatest problem in this war effort with relation to food is its transportation to its destination. Miss Barber also told that there is a good deal of waste of food in soldier camps since 10 per cent of the soldiers do not eat breakfast, and food which is not eaten must be disposed of as garbage.

Rep. Bolton Speaks

Congresswoman Frances P. Bolton was guest speaker yesterday at the Washington Club's last formal luncheon of the season. Mrs. Bolton spoke to the 150 members present on the subject of "Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow."

Letters From Home Important, Sailor Says

S. O. M. Cole, U. S. C. G., Gives His Impressions of Life in Iceland

By Peggy Preston

"You can be awful homesick in Iceland."

Twenty-one-year-old Bill Cole of the Coast Guard was trying earnestly to explain how things go, day in and day out with the men of the American armed forces on the green, arctic island.

Carrying the title of SOM, which means Sound Operations Man, the young sailor from Sandy Hook, Md., has sailed in and out of the harbors of Iceland for some three years. He has spent his last two Christmas holidays there, and in between times he has hunted submarines as a member of the crew of the history making Coast Guard Cutter Campbell, that recently engaged six enemy underseas craft in a 12-hour epic series of battles.

Last Christmas his ship brought 18,000 bags of mail from home to the men stationed in Iceland. He thinks that people at home do not know how much letters mean to men overseas he says they have no way of knowing because they have never experienced a loneliness like there can be up there.

"You have no idea how excited they get when a ship carrying mail from home arrives," he went on. "Last Christmas it just about made the day for them. Why a letter from home can be the most important thing in the world when you are that far away."

Brought Along Two Christmas Trees

The men of the Campbell brought along two trees, complete with trimmings. And on Christmas day they had a dinner aboard ship, with each man permitted to invite a man of another branch of the service. There were some 105 in all and with the aid of turkeys, hams and cranberries, also brought along for the occasion, they managed a dinner not too different from what they might have had at home.

But this typically lusty American sailor did not want to leave the impression that the various services were not doing everything possible to help the time pass pleasantly for the men.

"They do everything for us. They treat us fine," he pointed out several times by way of explaining that the homesickness was entirely a private affair.

As to life outside the posts and the people of Iceland themselves, SOM Cole said he liked them, but found them hard to know.

"They didn't like us very much when we first arrived," he said. "They thought we were too rough and rowdy."

But by last Christmas things were a lot better. "I guess we just wore them down by being around so much," he grinned.

Thinks Icelandic Girls Are Pretty

At any rate, American servicemen are now sometimes invited to native homes for dinner and daughters of the leading citizens are permitted to attend dances at the military posts. This according to the blond Coast Guardsman is a very fine state of affairs, as in his opinion the Icelandic girls are extremely easy to look at.

Of North European origin they are blue-eyed and blond, and he considers that they stack up quite favorably with their American contemporaries.

Fighting submarines is old stuff to this young man, and he has complete faith in the power and durability of his ship. In his three years of service with the Coast Guard he has never sailed on another but the Campbell and he has a fierce pride in her achievement.

Only evidence of battle on his person, despite his fighting record are two slightly burned fingers. Still bandaged they are well on the mend and he prefers that no one notice them as they mark his otherwise perfect record for no battle wounds.

Since his return he has been able to visit his family a few times in Sandy Hook and has been in and out of Washington on various assignments.

Richard C. Moore

Army's Shopper Concerned With Consumer's Needs

This is another in a series of stories about the men who are running the war. The next will appear on Monday.

By Patricia Grady

Consumers' welfare, from the khaki-eye view, is the job of Maj. Gen. Richard C. Moore.

This sunburned, blue-eyed officer is the No. 1 shopper, the Chief of the Requirements Section at Headquarters Army Ground Forces. It is his office that experiments with and develops military supplies, then makes its based-on-tests recommendations to military procurement outfits. It is his office that breaks down supply needs, sets up a sliding scale of requirements for how much of everything is needed to equip a given number of men.

Friendly, with a quick, warm laugh, the general knows how to explain military technicalities in terms the housewife can understand. "It's a shopping job," he explains, "like giving an order for a dress that isn't in stock. Then the buyer goes out and gets it for you."

General Moore likes to try things out for himself, has a personal curiosity about the new military developments. A capable administrator, he picks his subordinates carefully, then gives them the necessary leeway to get the job done. The most important thing he has learned in his long and impressive military career is "how to say no and mean it."

"We must be realistic about our production," warns this officer, who was Deputy Chief of Staff in the early months of our war. "It is dangerous not to be. Most of our equipment is as good as or better than the enemy's. But this has been the result of recent developments.

"The most encouraging aspect of our production history," he continues, "is the rapidity with which we've learned. But our enemies had a head start on us and still surpass us in some things. We cannot afford to be complacent."

GENERAL MOORE

The various supplies of the Army and projected improvements undergo rigorous checking by the requirements section. The general admits to having fallen under a spell once and ordering a piece of equipment without a thorough check. Events have proved his instinct sound. He took one look at a jeep, knew he had to have it. "Just like a woman window-spotting a new bonnet," he says with a laugh.

General Moore's section also has a pertinent part in the detailed organization and equipment tables of the Ground Forces and the editing and publication of all training manuals and training films.

He and Mrs. Moore have quarters at the Army War College, not far from his office. Greatest excitement in their quiet life recently was the return of their son, Milton, from overseas, where he was a lieutenant in the Transportation Corps. The general has no hobbies, although he has "always meant to cultivate one." Golf is his greatest athletic pastime and bridge his recreational runner-up.

Next week he is going up to West Point to attend the fortieth reunion of the class in which he graduated twelfth. The man who graduated first in the class of 1903 won't be able to attend this reunion, for Douglas MacArthur has a job to do in the South Pacific.

Served With Naval Mission In Peru

A native of California, Mo., General Moore sailed for the Philippines shortly after graduating from West Point. A series of duties in this country followed and then a stint in Cuba. Upon his return to the United States in 1907, he attended the Engineer School and several years later took over a desk in the Office of the Chief of Engineers here.

After graduating from the Army Field Engineer School in 1916 he had several engineering commands throughout the country before leaving for France to serve with the 318th Engineers. He was Assistant Chief Engineer of the Second Army and section engineer under the Department of Construction and Forestry, A. E. F.

Back home again, General Moore attended the Army School of the Line at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., completing the course as a distinguished graduate in June, 1920. He then attended General Staff School and, after graduation, remained as an instructor at the General Service Schools. His next classroom assignment was as a student at the Army War College, and after his graduation he came to Washington for his second tour in the Office of the Chief of Engineers.

General Moore served with the United States Naval Mission to Peru from 1928 to 1930 and then returned to a series of engineering duties in the river section of the Middle West. He assumed command of the Atlantic sector of the Panama Canal Department in 1938 and a year and a half later took over command of the Eighteenth Infantry Brigade in the Canal Zone.

When he returned to Washington in January, 1940, General Moore became Assistant Chief of Staff for Supply on the War Department General Staff and on July 25, 1940, was named Deputy Chief of Staff of the Army. In March of last year he took over his present duties.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Arthur Ringland Harris. Her prospective father-in-law is Maj. Gen. Allen W. Gullion, provost marshal general.

With the Rev. Howard Wilkinson officiating, the ceremony will take place at 4 p. m. Miss Abbott will be given in marriage by her father, and she will have as her matron of honor, Mrs. E. Taylor Chewning jr., the former Miss Mary Mitchell. Miss Frances Abbott will be maid of honor, and bridesmaids will include Miss Jane Booher of Washington, Miss Elizabeth Schriber of Oshkosh, Wis., and Miss Sallyann Rosenthal of Greenwich, Conn. Flower girls will be Allyn and Margaret Moorman, nieces of the bridegroom.

Miss Abbott was graduated from Maderia last June and has been attending Bennett Junior College. Lieutenant Gullion, who attended St. Alban's before entering the U. S. Military Academy, will be graduated from the latter on June 1.

Mme. Wei Entertains

Mme. Wei, wife of the Chinese Ambassador, entertained at tea yesterday afternoon at Twin Oaks, her guests numbering over 100. Many lingered on through the afternoon enjoying the May sunshine in the rolling garden or the shade of the huge old oak trees which tower toward the sky.

Edward Van Deventer left yesterday for Greenfield Hills, Fairfield, Conn., where he will be the guest of Mrs. Henry H. Rousseau, widow of Rear Admiral Rousseau. Mr. Van Deventer will return to the Capital Tuesday.

The Ambassador of Panama, Enrique A. Jiminez, was the guest in whose honor Dr. L. S. Rowe, Director General of the Pan American Union, entertained at luncheon yesterday in the Pan-American Annex.

Vice President Henry A. Wallace was in the company, which also included Dr. Paul Jiminez, on special mission to this country for the President of Panama; William Dawson, American Ambassador to Uruguay; Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson, Assistant Secretary of Interior Oscar L. Chapman, Commissioner of Education Dr. John W. Studebaker. Warren L. Piersol, president of the Export-Import Bank of Washington; Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, regent of the School of Foreign Service, Georgetown University; Dr. Edward C. Ernst, assistant director of the Pan American Sanitary Bureau; Dr. Harold G. Moulton, president of Brookings Institution, and Dr. Aristides A. Moll, secretary of the Pan American Sanitary Bureau.

Miss Boardman Is Guest at Service Dance

Miss Mabel T. Boardman, president of Sulgrave Club, was guest of honor at the Midweek Officers' Dance held last evening at the Sulgrave Club. Sharing honors with her were the Commandant of the Potomac River Naval Command and Mrs. Ferdinand Reichmuth. Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. W. D. Thompson and Capt. John Simpson also shared the limelight.

Tables set up in the club's cool garden proved an added attraction, and Cinda Glenn, feature artist, won round after round of applause for her performance.

Mrs. Lee Murphy presented the ladies' door prize, and Ensign Pierce McDonald one for the officers. The dance floor was not too crowded, as Miss Emily French Myers, chairman of the dance committee, is keeping the guest list limited.

The dances will continue throughout the summer each month, announcement of the seventh in the seres to be made next week after a meeting of the committee.

Wife of Ecuador's President Is Feted At Large and Lavish Mayflower Luncheon

For the first time since the beginning of war, a foreign President's wife was feted at a large and lavish luncheon in Washington yesterday.

She was Senora de Arroyo, wife of the President of Ecuador, and her hostess was the Ecuador Ambassador's wife, Senora de Alfaro, who gathered in 60 of her friends for a party that made social history on many accounts.

The Chinese room of the Mayflower Hotel was the scene of the luncheon, which was attended by a top-drawer list of guests headed by Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, a trio of Cabinet hostesses, wives of Latin-American envoys, and a number from the State Department contingent.

It has been a long time since I have sat down to a table, set with gold plate and decorated with that handsome and towering gold centerpiece, gold epergnes, and matching candlesticks topped by tapers carrying out the colors of Ecuador—blue, red and gold.

I haven't seen a more distinguished group of women under one roof in months. Mrs. Cordell Hull, whose partying appearances have been rare the past year, arrived with Mrs. Jesse Jones and Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson.

"And how did you three get here?" I asked, in my nosey way, remembering of course that most of us have gone everywhere a-foot since the recent gas rationing measure got under way. Well, it seems they all came in one car, and that car belonged to Mme. Martins, wife of the Brazilian Ambassador, who fell ill at the last moment and couldn't accompany the guests she had invited to ride with her.

"I came in by chicken truck," announced Mrs. Harold Ickes. She added that she couldn't get anywhere now, unless that truck happened to be going, or coming, her way. In the midst of our discussion of transportation problems, somebody coasted up, and let fly the most flattering round of compliments I've heard in a long time.

"I simply adore your husband's new book," she said to Mrs. Ickes. "He is so wonderful!"

"Of course he is," Mrs. Ickes came back, leaving all of us speechless for at least two seconds. Somehow, I'm never prepared for the all-out acceptance of any fact that Washington's official wives seem more than ready to take for granted in regard to their husbands. (But I, too, think the new Ickes book is "wonderful.")

"And how did you get to the party?" I asked Mrs. Frank Walker, wife of the Postmaster General.

"I came by elevator," she answered with a smile; and then I remembered the Mayflower Hotel is her Washington home, and getting to any party there is merely a matter of ringing a bell.

"How does your garden grow—Ilo?" somebody asked Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, probably having read that she and the Vice President have been doing some grade A victory gardening over on the plot of ground near the Swiss Legation.

"It does very well," answered Mrs. Wallace. And then she proceeded to greet some approaching Latin-American hostess in Spanish. I had heard, of course, all about the Vice President's proficiency in Spanish, but I didn't know his wife spoke it, also.

Mrs. Adolf Berle was another there who was speaking Spanish with enviable fluency. Mrs. Sumner Welles and Mrs. Robert H. Jackson were others who seemed to be getting on very well with a sizable contingent of Latin-American hostesses—but I don't know yet whether the group was speaking Spanish or English.

"So sorry you're leaving Washington," everybody seemed to be saying to Senora de DeBayle, who with her husband, the Minister of Nicaragua, will be off next month for their homeland.

"I'm sorry, too," she replied, "I love Washington; but I know you'll like the new Minister and his wife." Most of us, of course, already have met the former Lillian Somoza, daughter of the President of Nicaragua; and we read with avid interest reports of her marriage not long ago to Dr. Guillermo Sevilla Sacasa, who will be Nicaragua's next Minister here.

But back to yesterday's party. Who else was there? Well, let's see. Virtually all the wives of envoys from the Central and South American countries; Mrs. Nelson Rockefeller, who seemed to know everybody present; attractive Mrs. Stanley Woodward, who seemed more than amused when somebody posed the threadbare question, "And what are your summer plans, Mrs. Woodward?"

"What could they be?" she came back with a twinkle. "How can anybody get out of town? If I do get away—it will probably be down to the farm."

I seem to be getting away from yesterday's luncheon again . . . but that's all right at this point, as I've told you just about all I know—except that several wives of State Department officials were among those present; and all seemed to be more than pleased with the dish featured on the menu. I asked Mrs. Archibald Grey, who happened to sit next to me, what it was. "It's a Paella a la Valenciana," she replied. "And if it's made the way we used to have it in Santiago, its chief component is octopus."

Supper Dance for Servicemen

Several large parties for servicemen and women in Washington will be held tomorrow night under auspices of the Home Hospitality Commtitee.

A supper dance will take place at 1526 New Hampshire Avenue. Hostesses at the affair, beginning at 8:30, will be Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, Lady Baillieu, Mrs. Frank Morrow, Mrs. William Borah, Mrs. Claude Swanson, Mrs. Henry Milmore, Mrs. Emerson Howe, Mrs. A. H. Williard, Mrs. Randolph Miner, Mrs. John Dwight and Mrs. William Culbertson.

Other hostesses will be Mrs. French Myers, Countess de Castellane, Mrs. William Jennings Price, Mrs. Ollie James, Mrs. Esther Norment, Mrs. Jack Bell, Mrs. Daniel Stapleton and Mrs. J. H. Torrey.

Miss Margaret Mechlin entertained last night at a supper party, and Mrs. A. R. Garfinkle will give a party tomorrow night. Mrs. Robert Mitchell plans a similar affair for Sunday evening.

The committee, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Martin Vogel, has sponsored many hundreds of such parties during the last year. Plans for summer events include boat parties and picnics.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

The old conception that musicians feed upon ambrosia and nectar is as outdated as a hoop-skirt. Musicians now realize that they must have a good physical basis upon which to operate. Late hours for appearance and long rehearsal periods require more nourishment than a bottle of soda pop and a handful of peanuts can provide.

When you see the 12 attractive girls who make up the all-girl orchestra, known as Betty McGuire and her lovely sub-debs, you see a dozen wholesome, vibrant and appealing girls.

It is no accident that 12 such girls form this orchestra. This organization did not "just happen." Careful planning by their manager, Miss Elizabeth Hill, has resulted in a group of girls who are carrying on nobly with their dance orchestra while male musicians go on to hear the din of battle.

Betty McGuire, a winsome girl of 18 years, is the leader of the band which is now playing dance music at the Victory Room of the Roosevelt Hotel. Ever since Betty was a little girl she has been twirling a baton or a baseball bat back in her home town of Hinsdale, Ill.

The thought of having an all-girl orchestra finally became so urgent that she discussed the idea with her dramatic teacher, Miss Hill, who is now the manager of the orchestra. Miss Hill weighed the pros and cons of the life these girls would lead as a touring musical organization. She told them of the procedure they would have to follow if they were to be an outstanding musical group. The results of her advice are gratifying.

Do Own Cooking

Breakfast, lunch and dinner are planned with great care. Although Miss Hill offers her advice on meal planning, yet the budgeting of food ration points and money is left to "Flo" Shefte. Whenever possible the girls take a house so that they can do their own cooking. Hartford, Conn., was their home for seven months. They rented a farm home, complete with cows, chickens and other produce and lived the life of "lady farmers." Twelve quarts of milk was consumed daily by the girls.

I asked "Flo" if she had much difficulty with her food budgeting and marketing. "No," she replied, "only I have learned that you have to be ever ready for adjustments. But after all that is what life is made up of—a number of adjustments.

Betty told me that there is not a finicky appetite in the dozen. Their tastes are for the normal foods—roasts, ham, turkey, any kind of vegetables. They do have some specialties. Sour cream chocolate cake with caramel icing as "Flo" bakes it is a great favorite. Dolly Lein, whose home is in Donner's Grove, Ill., concocts a spaghetti dish with "divine" meat sauce. Dolly is one of nine children so quantity cookery is no new thing in her life. Green vegetable salad with "gunpowder" salad dressing is also a favorite of the girls. This dressing is a French dressing which is made by "Flo" who plays the trumpet in the orchestra.

Miss Florence Shefte (seated) and Miss Elizabeth Hurtenback, two members of the all-girl orchestra now playing in Washington, are shown above planning meals. "Flo" is the budgeteer of the group, while Elizabeth makes pies as well as she plays bass

A daily line-up of their menus is the type that can be used in any family for the meals are appealing, nutritious and attractive. Here are representative menus for their three squares per day:

"Flo," the budgeteer of this musical organization is the cake baker. Sour cream chocolate cake with caramel icing is the cake of all cakes for this group. They have enough sugar for baking an occasional cake and here is Flo's own recipe for this delicious cake:

DEVIL'S FOOD CAKE

Sift cake flour once. Measure to 2 cups. Than add 1 teaspoon soda and ½ teaspoon salt and sift three times. Cream 1-3 cup butter or other shortening thoroughly, add 1¼ cups sugar gradually and cream all. Beat in 1 egg, then add 3 squares unsweetened chocolate which has been melted. Add about ¼ of the flour and beat well. Next add ½ cup thick sour cream. Add the remaining flour, alternately with ¾ cup sweet milk, in small amounts, beating after each addition. Add 1 teaspoon vanilla. Bake in 2 greased 9-inch layer pans in moderate oven, 350 degrees, for 30 minutes. Spread with caramel frosting.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

On Bossing Women

Why doesn't the average factory foreman want women around?

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins threw the question to newspaper women during her address before the Women's National Press Club. "Solve it if you can," she said. The Secretary went on to say that while women employes usually won the industrial foreman over by their work performance, they nevertheless faced his initial prejudice. Why was this?

Accepting the challenge, this column conjectures that the average factory foreman doesn't want—or thinks he doesn't want—women workers because:

Such strange beings have never worked in his factory before; they represent the unknown and the new (always doubly perilous in its feminine aspects); they will upset the nice comfortable old regime that has been plenty good so far.

As soon as a woman employe gets any good, she will up and leave to marry, to have a baby, to follow her husband somewhere, or to have a rest or a nervous breakdown;

His style will be cramped in bawling out those who need it, and when he does, the woman victim will not take it like a man and then get over it, but will pout around for days;

Both he and his men will have to be more careful about swearing and kidding and going around in their undershirts (or even without), and will have to shave and wash behind the ears oftener;

Women won't bear their share of the load and will expect masculine chivalry to take up the slack;

His men workers will be distracted by having the place populated with females, all of whom will be Lana Turners, or at least Mae Wests.

He expects (judging from his home experience) to have some woman employe always telling him that her sinus is bothering her or that she is terribly nervous, or ought to have an operation, or that she simply has too much at home to do and can't do her shopping because there are no cotton blouses or potatoes.

He fully believes all the women workers will be constantly clawing each other's eyes out, or at least engaging in what men call "cat fights" when applied to women, and "differences of opinion" when applied to themselves;

He fears the women will be having upsetting ideas about things, wanting to change the machinery around, try out simpler methods and short cuts (and indeed that is quite likely, says Secretary Perkins), and asking questions why this or that isn't done;

He foresees that they will make an uproar over the small, dirty, mice-infested wash and rest rooms and want to do something about the ventilation and the lights;

Being women, they are bound to be jealous of one another and continually backbiting and undercutting each other;

He fears—in fact he knows—they will talk too much, and probably do plenty of talking about him;

In any conflict with them, he knows they will use baffling secret feminine weapons, against which he will feel helpless;

He senses—and possibly rightly—that "managing" a woman employe will take more out of him than managing half a dozen men;

He unconsciously sees in them his policeman, his mentor, his antagonist of the ages — woman trailing him to his last refuge; woman, against whom in his savage days he used charms and ceremonies to insulate and immunize himself; woman who as his mother bound her to him through his helplessness and never entirely let him go; woman, who as his teacher, bossed, nagged and improved him; woman, who as his sweetheart, overpowered him and tamed him and nipped his eagle adventuring; woman, who as his wife, domesticated him and managed him; woman, who through the years has been gradually shearing him of his power, his authority, his freedom and who has been following him around, making him wash and behave and stay home; woman, who has been crowding further into his life with her demands, her help—yes, and her understanding; woman, whom he cannot fathom or escape; woman, who is his universal danger and his universal need.

Memo To— Miss Brown

SUBJECT:

Six Days' Leave

That's the official word—not more than six days' leave in sequence—and it's not exactly a welcome word now that we're becoming frayed around the edges from our strenuous winter of work, play and not quite enough sleep. The kibosh is on our dreams of a jaunt to Maine or California, so it's time to begin wondering just what's to be done with the modicum of hours at our command.

What goes on in our nearby States of Maryland and Virginia? They're surely worth considering in our search for close at hand summer wanderings. Both States have mountains and both have seashores—dear to the hearts of vacationers—and both have plenty of fascinating things to see.

If it's the rough and ready life you yearn for, best thing we've heard of in years is the Maryland State park system. Most of these parks have fishing, boating, bathing and hiking facilities and in some you can rent a log cabin with fireplace for $12 to $18 a week. Pretty special for the crowd if you can all manage to get away simultaneously. If you are one of a bunch of indispensible women, you can get accommodations for ones and two for as little as $6 a week. The Maryland Publicity Commission, State Office Building, Annapolis, Md., will send you descriptions of the 10 State parks and what's to be done in each. Fishing licenses, by the way, cost $1 a season for residents; nonresidents, $5; and the lakes are well stocked with good old rainbow trout and large- or small-mouth bass. Three of the parks, by the way, are close enough to Washington to be practical bicycle expeditions—if you're good at long-term biking.

As for good old-fashioned sightseeing, you don't have to go far to discover why people from all over the country have been coming to those parts for years at vacation time. There are some of the most delightful (and tradition-steeped) spots in the country just a hop and skip from Washington. For instance, perhaps you've heard a little about Williamsburg, Va., and the restoration of same by John D. Rockefeller. Homes, taverns, gardens and costumes are colonial to the nth degree—and there are a lot of fascinating places to visit in this former capital of Virginia. There's the Governor's palace, the famous craft shops, and even the more modern attractions of golf, swimming, skiing, tennis and fishing. There's dancing, too, at several of the lovely inns. Get out your hoop skirts, Lulu Belle! If you stay for six days, plan to include short jaunts to such nearby spots as Jamestown (shades of John Smith) and Yorktown, where Cornwallis surrendered to Washington. As for accommodations, there's the elegant Williamsburg Inn and the much less expensive Williamsburg Lodge; also a number of taverns and guest houses complete with fried chicken. Yes, suh! William and Mary College is in Williamsburg, too, and is worth more than a look. Gee, Brenda, men.

Charlottesville is another Virginia city in a somewhat similar vein. Here lies Monticello, Jefferson's home; the University of Virginia, founded and designed by this same gentleman, and Ashlawn, home of James Monroe. Charlottesville is just a small piece of road removed from Shenandoah National Park in the Blue Ridge Mounutains—which should suggest a combination of what-to-dos.

OPA's Food Price Rollback Scheduled 'Soon After' June 1

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

OPA's food subsidy program will not get into effect on June 1 as previously announced, but "as close to the first week in June as possible," Price Administrator Prentiss Brown said yesterday.

Among questions yet to be settled, the price chief declared, are: "How are we going to get the money to the processor?" and "What is to be done about retail stocks already on hand?"

Representatives from the meat and butter industries will be in conferences again today with officials of OPA, WFA, RFC and the Office of Economic Stabilization—studying "ways and means."

Weeks May Be Needed

Remembering the processor-tax complexities of early New Deal days, the industry men and some of the officials believe several weeks will be needed to work out the program and that it will be tried out bit by bit.

The program calls for a rollback of 10 per cent in the retail prices of meat, butter, and coffee, the Government using subsidies at processor levels to prevent the reduction going to producer levels.

When the price cuts are made, however, stores will have supplies on hand, obtained at higher prices. Administrator Brown indicated a "retail subsidy" to make up this automatic loss was not out of the question.

He said 480 million dollars would be enough to keep the rollback in effect one year, he believed. "And OPA will be through then unless its life is extended by Congress. I hope I'm through here, too, by that time," he added.

Must Convince Congress

His biggest job right now, Brown declared, is trying to convince Congress of the soundness of the food subsidy idea.

Through it the OPA will be able to turn the cost of living back to what it was last September 15, he said, expressing belief labor "is entitled to that."

This turnback, he stressed, does not mean all food costs will be back to that level—but that the over-all level of the cost of living will be back to that point.

Group Asks Tighter Control Of Agencies

Federal corporations' freedom from centralized control and review was announced yesterday in a pamphlet isued by the Citizens National Committee, an organization operating from Washington to coordinate public demand for "efficient and adequate but prudent government."

In a survey of existing Government corporations, the publication says Federal use of the corporate type of agencies has "multiplied significantly" in the last decade and that although their borrowing power "exceeds 30 billion dollars, many of them do not render accounts." Neither are they subject to the check of having to secure congressional appropriation through budget procedures, it was stated.

Assuming that operations of Government corporations vitally affect inflation, Government costs and displacement of private enterprise by subsidized Government enterprise, the committee asks how agencies are "subsidized and privileged to the detriment of unsubsidized competitors and taxpayers." It further asks, should receipts of these agencies be put in the Treasury and disbursed under a system which would insure adequate financial control, to what extent are agencies using present favorable trends to liquidate indebtedness and using interest-free Government capital to buy Government obligations, income from which provides operating revenue for the agency?

Review to Honor Dr. M. W. Johnson At Howard U.

Annual military day will be observed at Howard University today at 1:15 p. m. with a regimental review in honor of Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, university president in the stadium. Squad, platoon, company and individual competitions will be featured.

Awards and certificates of efficiency will be presented to various students, and a conduct medal to the military instructor, Sergt. Amos Robinson, DEML, Military District of Washington, for exemplary behavior, fidelity, efficiency and other soldierly qualities.

Personal contests, involving two members from each company, will include the hand wrestle, rooster fight, Roman wrestle, and one-man-pull. Group games will include medicine ball relay, sprint relay, pig-a-back relay, chair relay, with 10 contestants from each company.

Homemakers Clubs In Montgomery Cancel Meetings

The Montgomery County Council of Homemakers Clubs has joined other county groups in canceling scheduled meetings because of the gasoline shortage.

It was announced at the office of the county home demonstration agent at Rockville that the annual meeting of the council, scheduled at Gaithersburg next Thursday, has been called off.

In that connection, Miss Edythe M. Turner, home demonstration agent, said, "It would not be right for us to use gas to attend such a meeting in light of the present situation. There are too many of our families in this county having sons abroad and we know what gas supplies are needed for in relation to their protection, so it is wise to postpone this meeting until later in the summer. Then, if the situation clarifies, we can meet."
